OUSTED BOARD OUSTS MARTIN IN UAW PUZZLE

Suspended Leaders Prepare to Impeach Chief Who Suspended Them In First Place.

LOOK FOR CIO TO ACT

Tangled Auto Union's Affairs More Complicated; Court Fight Possibility.

(By Associated Press)

DETROIT—The notes of discord in the United Automobile Workers crescendoed to a new high today, with the suspended leaders of one faction suspending and preparing to impeach their chief opponent—who suspended them in the first place.

The tangled situation in the now dis-united auto workers took on the aspects of a merry-go-round that never stops.

The UAW was, in effect, a dual union with this incongruous line-up:

No president but one claimant to the office; two secretary-treasurers; two executive boards holding forth in separate hotels while the international headquarters were closed; rival bosses for a single weekly union paper, and two conventions to elect officers to be held in different cities in March.

Court Fight Seen.

Some observers predicted that only the courts could straighten out the intricacies in which groups led by and opposing Homer Martin, who retained his claim to the presidency, found themselves involved.

Whether the parent Congress of Industrial Organizations again would take a hand in the affairs of one of its biggest unions, which claims a membership approaching 400,000, was unknown. Previous endeavors by the CIO to subdue the factional flareups proved effective only temporarily.

Yesterday Martin, former minister who has headed the UAW since it parted from the AFL in 1936, announced the suspension of 15 of the executive board's 24 members after they had reduced his authority until he was only a figurehead.

Cite Eight Charges.

Then last night the suspended 15 board members and two others unanimously adopted a resolution suspending Martin as president and calling for his impeachment on eight charges.

While this was happening Martin and the remaining seven members of the board met, acting as the executive board of the union, and chose Loren Houser, one of the group, to act as international secretary-treasurer in place of George F. Addes, spokesman for the suspended anti-Martin majority on the board.

Parents Lose As Girl, 7, Is Sent To County Home

The central figure in county court battles for two months, dimpled, seven-year-old Vonda Jean Allen entered the Richland county children's home today.

Both her parents lost their fight to obtain custody of the child in probate court late yesterday, and Judge C. J. Anderson ordered the girl to the children's home, holding that the parents were unable to provide a suitable home for her.

Nearly a dozen witnesses were heard by Judge Anderson in a five-hour session before he decided the case. Neither parent protested the decision.

The child's mother, Mrs. Helen Marshall, Mansfield, started the court proceedings nearly two months ago when she filed a habeas corpus action against Paul Mason, of Iberia, Morrow county, the girl's father, with whom the child had been staying.

The habeas writ was dismissed in common pleas court and Judge Anderson then gave Mason temporary custody of the girl.

Hospital Filled to Capacity, Seek Way to Add Ward Space

Dr. Fonkalsrud To Submit Proposal At Annual Meeting; Victim of Crash Injury Sent To Thomas Hospital Because of Lack of Room.

With both wards and private rooms of Mansfield General hospital filled to capacity, and a "waiting list" of patients seeking admission, trustees of the hospital were preparing today to develop a temporary remedy for a critical situation.

Dr. A. O. Fonkalsrud said today that he would submit a plan for increasing the ward space at the annual meeting of the trustees next Friday night.

At present, only the maternity ward is not taxed to capacity, and rooms in the maternity ward cannot be used for any other type of patient.

Only last night, hospital authorities turned away one emergency case—that of Ora A. Kress, 52, Dayton, who was injured in a truck-automobile crash on route 42 in Lexington.

Given preliminary treatment by Dr. M. C. Oakes, Lexington, Kress was brought to General hospital, but was taken to Eleanor Thomas hospital because General hospital had no room for him.

Dr. Fonkalsrud explained that Kress had not suffered severe injuries, but that any critically injured person would have been admitted and cared for "somehow."

"The fact remains however, that all our ward beds are in use and that our present ward space is inadequate," Dr. Fonkalsrud said. "I expect to submit a plan at the annual meeting next Friday that will make more ward space available and will increase the number of beds.

Eight on Waiting List.

Dr. Fonkalsrud also revealed that there are eight Mansfielders now waiting for hospital treatment for whom there is no room at present.

"None of the cases is urgent, however," he explained.

Dr. F. J. Heringhaus, president of the medical staff, and Dr. W. E. Wygant, past president, joined Dr. Fonkalsrud in terming ward facilities at the hospital inadequate.

"The hospital is full at the present time, a situation that arises every once in a while," Dr. Heringhaus said. "In the event of a major catastrophe, our facilities certainly would be overtaxed."

"It is ward space that's needed most," Dr. Wygant said. "In the event of a major accident, that's where the patient would go."

Winter is due to stage a vigorous comeback Sunday night when a cold wave sweeps into Ohio from the northwest, the weatherman forecast today.

CARR PREPARES OUSTER FIGHT

Highway Personnel Director Who Defied Chief Faces 5 Charges In Complaint.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—J. Matthew Carr, suspended highway department personnel director, faced today the ouster charges he defied Highway Director Robert S. Beightler to file against him.

Beightler, who has dismissed more than 1,300 highway employes since Jan. 9, lodged the charges with civil service commissioners late yesterday and said the 30-day suspension order filed against Carr Jan. 16, would be cut to 10 days.

Beightler charged Carr with neglect of duty, malfeasance in office, unlawful solicitation of funds for political campaigns, ordering and permitting classified employes in the personnel division to engage in political activity, and "wrongfully ordering and permitting Edith A. Groh and others to destroy certain letters and correspondence in the files of the department."

Following his suspension, Carr called attention to his civil service rank and said that any charges filed against him would have to be proved. He was appointed during the administration of former Gov. George White.

L. N. Wagner of Ashland, meanwhile, asked common pleas court to restore his job as cost clerk in division 3 from which he was discharged Aug. 8 by Ivan R. Ault, former highway director. Wagner contended he was entitled to notification of the reason for his removal and Judge Cecil J. Randall issued a preliminary writ of mandamus, answerable Feb. 3.

GEORGE RAFT, STUDIO SPLIT

Actor's $4,250-a-Week Contract Cancelled After Scrap.

HOLLYWOOD —(AP)— George Raft and Paramount pictures were quits today, but who did the quitting was a matter of conjecture.

Raft, a product of the sidewalks of New York who doesn't like villain roles, announced he was refusing the lead in "Magnificent Fraud." It was the latest of a series of revolts which the ex-boxer and dancer has staged against being "typed" as an actor.

The studio retorted that it is quitting Raft, and cancelled his $4,250-per-week contract which would expire the middle of next month.

His place in "Magnificent Fraud" will go to Lloyd Nolan, Paramount announced.

Senate Group OK's Cut WPA Fund But Sees 'Beating' Ahead

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON —(AP)— The senate appropriations committee approved today a $725,000,000 relief appropriation. This sum, $150,000,000 less than the amount asked by President Roosevelt, already has been approved by the house.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Economy advocates will probably "get the whey beaten" out of them when the question of slashing $150,000,000 from the WPA fund asked by President Roosevelt reaches the senate floor Senator Adams (D-Colo.) conceded ruefully today.

Adams is chairman of the senate subcommittee which yesterday followed the example of the house of representatives and voted $725,000,000, instead of the $875,000,000 requested by Mr. Roosevelt, to operate the work relief agency through June 30. The vote was 8 to 3.

The Coloradan, who voted for the reduction, predicted it probably would be approved today by the full senate appropriations committee. But he added:

"The committee will probably get the whey beaten out of it on the floor of the senate—as it usually does when it makes an honest effort to economize."

Gets Millions From Ruppert

To Helen Winthrope Weyant, a comparatively unknown young chorus girl, the late Col. Jacob Ruppert, multimillionaire brewer and owner of the New York Yankees, left one-third of his fortune variously estimated at between $30,000,000 to $70,000,000. Miss Weyant was described as a very "dear friend" of the late brewer. The remaining two-thirds goes to two nieces. The will provided for a $300,000 immediate bequest to Miss Weyant. "I feel honored by the bequest. Col. Ruppert had known me and my family since I was a little girl. He had always been one of our closest friends," Miss Weyant said today.

Ruppert's Bequest Leaves 'Cinderella Girl' Dazed

Former Ballet Dancer Bewildered By Sudden Wealth Left to Her By Brewer, Owner of N. Y. Yankees.

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK—Helen Winthrope Weyant, former actress who was named as chief beneficiary in the will of Col. Jacob Ruppert, recovered from bewilderment of her sudden good fortune today and said she hoped to "do good" with the golden cascade that has poured into her life.

Raised from modest means to overwhelming wealth by a few scratches of a pen, the 37-year-old brunet who came to New York nine years ago seeking fame as a ballet dancer and appeared in three Broadway hits, added that she also would like to indulge her tastes for art and travel.

But she was still too overcome by the wealth she has received to speak definitely of her plans.

Gets $300,000 Cash.

Miss Weyant received an outright gift of $300,000 and a one-third share of the residuary estate, estimated up to $70,000,000, left by Col. Ruppert.

This means she will share the ownership of the New York Yankees with Ruppert's two nieces, Mrs. Joseph Holleran and Mrs. J. Basil Maguire, both of Greenwich, Conn.

The residuary estate includes the sportsman's brewing interests and real estate holdings.

Miss Weyant, as did the nieces, disclaimed any interest in operating the New York baseball team. All three will leave that to the masculine board of command.

In a few days Miss Weyant will

VOTE TO STRIKE

2,000 Radio Entertainers In Demand For Higher Wages.

CHICAGO—(AP)—Nearly 2,000 of the country's professional radio entertainers were ready today to strike for higher wages.

The Chicago local of the American Federation of Radio Artists voted unanimously last night to strike upon orders from the national executive board.

Like action was taken earlier this week by the New York local, and balloting was scheduled for today in Los Angeles and tomorrow in San Francisco.

A rejection by the American Association of Advertising agencies of demands for an increased wage scale and pay for rehearsals was the basis for the threatened strike.

ESCAPE DEATH IN BUILDING CRASH

Front of Vacant New York Tenement Building Collapses.

NEW YORK—(AP)—The entire front of a four-story unoccupied brick tenement at 55th street and 11th avenue collapsed shortly before noon today, imperiling the lives of children and others in the neighborhood.

But after a thorough search of the rubble of bricks and mortar and broken lath, Fire Chief William Taubert said he was convinced no one had been killed or injured.

The first reports were that a number of children, playing on the sidewalk, had been trapped in the shower of bricks.

Nazi Chieftain Consolidates Hold on Germany, Refugee Problem Still Unsolved.

(By International News Service)

BERLIN—Undisputed master of German finance as well as all other factors of the third reich, Chancellor Adolf Hitler strengthened the military preparedness of the nation today and launched anew his diplomatic "drive to the east."

With his far-reaching powers made all the more absolute by removal of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht from the presidency of the Reichsbank, the fuehrer lost no time in voicing to the world new evidence of Germany's determination to proceed unswervingly on the path of European mastery he outlined years ago in his book "My Struggle."

Eases U. S. Tension.

At th esame time, he took a step toward improving strained relations with the United States by appointing Capt. Fritz Wiedemann, his Bavarian adjutant and close adviser, to the post of German consul-general in San Francisco.

Hitler's move to strengthen the military preparedness of Germany was taken in the form of an official decree announcing that all men completing their regular term of military service will be organized into defense detachments.

These in turn will be incorporated into the Nazi storm troops—a step primarily designed to bolster the fuehrer's private army and ensure unswerving loyalty by millions of uniformed Nazis. The decree marked another step in Hitler's campaign to reduce the powers of the military clique which rules the reichswehr—Germany's regular army.

As announced by the fuehrer,

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—Oscar Getz of Chicago, holder of $10,000 in Baltimore & Ohio Railroad company bonds, filed suit in U. S district court today seeking to force the carrier into receivership.

Named as defendants in the action were the B. & O. trustees for authorized bond issues not to exceed $10,000,000 the Central Hanover bank and Trust company; James N. Wallace and George W. Davison.

Getz' complaint, alleging numerous violations of an indenture of trust securing the bonds, asked that the defendants be restrained from disposing of any securities pledged under the indenture; an accounting of all securities and properties; damages for bondholders; the removal of the trustees, and receivership for the securities and the railroad.

The U. S. Coast Guard said the airliner reported she was "down in trouble."

'Tightening Up' Of Regulations Follows Parley

Mayor, Nist And Bates Agree On Move After Studying Chief's 1938 Report Showing Reduction In Arrests; Police Hear Order Monday.

Following a 40-minute conference during which he and Mayor Claude M. Hunter went over the police department report for 1938 with Chief Meade K. Bates, Service-Safety Director Earl A. Nist announced today that a sustained and thorough traffic enforcement campaign had been ordered in the city.

Nist said that the three had agreed on the move and Chief Bates confirmed the announcement by issuing a call for a special meeting Monday night of all members of the department, at which time orders will be given for "stricter enforcement" of traffic regulations.

Nist said that the annual report of activities of the department had been gone over with particular attention given to the 40 per cent decrease in traffic arrests.

He said that Bates had pointed out that the drop was due largely to the loss of 263 days by members of the police department who had been ill, resulting in an undermanned force.

With a full force now available for duty, Nist said that a shift would be made in the department which would place one patrolman entirely on motorcycle duty on the first shift.

More Emphasis On Parking.

"With one patrolman on motorcycle, more emphasis will be placed on traffic enforcement," Nist said, "particularly on the parking regulations."

He added that a sustained drive would be made against double and overtime parking in the business district as well as traffic violations throughout the city.

Bates renewed his request for two additional patrolmen during the conference but the question will not be considered until the parking meter legislation which now confronts city council has been disposed of, Nist said.

"I am of the opinion that two more men should be added to the force and that a separate division of traffic should be created for the sole purpose of enforcing traffic regulations," the director said.

He added, however, that although he favored more men, the recommendation will not be made to council until finances permit additional appropriations for the police department.

He pointed out that the installa-

MEET ON SCHOOL CONSOLIDATION

Board Members From 3 Rural Districts Confer Today With County Officials.

BULLETIN

School board members from Butler and Bloominggrove townships and the Union school district were still in conference with members of the county school board at 1:45 p. m. today, more than three hours after the conference opened.

School board members from Butler and Bloominggrove townships and the Union rural district north of Mansfield were conferring this afternoon with the county board of education on a plan for consolidating the three rural districts into one unit.

Called by the county board following the defeat of a $19,000 school bond issue in the Union district, the meeting was expected to develop a solution to the consolidation problem which has plagued the county board for two years.

Under a previous proposal, Butler and Bloominggrove districts would be added to the Union district which comprises Weller and Franklin townships. A centralized high school would serve the four townships.

Considerable opposition to the plan, however, was voiced in Butler and Bloominggrove townships which sought to keep their schools.

Consolidation of the county's one-room schools and small high schools was ordered by the state department of education to reduce operating costs. Consolidation has been completed in the southern half of the county.

Election of officers of the county board was also scheduled for today's meeting held in the county superintendent's office at the courthouse.

Appointed by the county board of education, Moffett will receive $2,500 a year. He is a graduate of Wittenberg college and holds a Master's degree from Ohio State university.

SEIZE SLOTS

Officers Pick Up Devices at Loudonville Lodge Hall.

ASHLAND — Deputy sheriffs and Marshall Bert Conrad of Loudonville today confiscated four slot machines in the clubrooms of the Loudonville Eagles lodge, to be used as evidence in a damage suit against the lodge.

Failing to obtain the machines on a previous visit to the lodge clubrooms, authorities said they found the devices locked in a room at the lodge headquarters. Officers broke the lock to get the machines, it was said.

Authorities said the machines would be used as evidence in the trial of a suit in which Mrs. Fannie Polsky of Loudonville asks $5,000 from the Eagles lodge, for losses her husband allegedly suffered in games at the lodge clubrooms.

The slot machines are being held at the Ashland county jail.

Barcelona Quiet As Defenders Battle In Civil War's Crisis

(By International News Service)

BARCELONA—Out in the frozen Sierras where Spain's fate is being fought out in furious bloodshed and devastation, the defenders of Barcelona battled today literally with their backs to the wall—the wall of low mountains in the hinterland behind the metropolis.

Yet in Barcelona there was no trace of fright, no outward indication that brestworks are being hastily thrown up outside the city; only the haggard and tattered refugees and the ruins of bombed buildings reminded Barcelonans that the war's crisis is at hand.

Nothing could more clearly indicate the coolness of this great city than this. Tickets are being issued calmly for the second part of the musical season. It begins Sunday, and lasts for weeks. The demand is large, showing that Barcelona expects no change in its normal routine for a long time.

With insurgent victories, achieved under "intense pressure," conceded by the government, Catalonia's defense forces fell back in order to a fresh line, well fortified, running from the seacoast to a point six miles northeast of Pons.

The loss of Calaf, in the heart of the Catalan line where the insurgents are hammering towards the Barcelona-France railway, and Sheriff Weiss had cross-petitioned asking judgment for $3,000 for injuries to himself received in the accident. The jury deliberated two hours before rendering the verdict and Common Pleas Judge R. B. Putnam required an hour and 40 minutes to charge the jury.

The trial was in progress here for four days and daily attracted a courtroom full of spectators. Each side is to pay their own attorney fees and the costs were assessed against the plaintiff.

Eugene J. Chesney of Cleveland, represented the plaintiff and the defendant was represented by Cary, Estill and Kuhn and Garver and Badger, all of Millersburg.

Plastic Airplanes Loom As Boon To Mass Production

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Development of a revolutionary method of casting airplane wings and fuselages in single pieces, stronger and lighter than those now in use, may solve one of the government's aerial armament problems.

The new method, substituting plastics for metal or other materials, soon will be in commercial use, George A. Baekland, vice president of Bakelite corporation, told the national economic committee yesterday. He testified at the committee's inquiry into patents.

Baekland said the invention had been a carefully guarded secret but that he had obtained permission to describe it publicly.

One of the armament problems which has been described by administration experts is to assure facilities for mass production of airplanes in case of an emergency.

Baekland, who explained that his company supplied only the material and that a former colonel in the air corps devised the method, said it would be possible for nine men, using "rather simple and inexpensive equipment," to produce a fuselage or wing in two hours.

DAVEY APPEARS FOR DEPOSITION

Gives Testimony In Bradley Case Involving Charge Of False Arrest.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS—Describing it as a "fishing expedition and publicity stunt," former Governor Martin L. Davey testified today in a deposition taken by attorneys for Lee Bradley, witness for a state senate investigating committee last year, who is suing Davey for $500,000 damages for alleged false arrest.

An impasse occurred when Davey refused to answer questions concerning his personal holdings as of Feb. 19, 1938, the date Bradley charged Davey had him falsely arrested in Cleveland on a perjury charge.

Davey's attorney and former secretary, John M. Caren, and Bradley's attorneys, F. C. Sibley, Detroit, and W. B. Bartels, then went before Common Pleas Judge Duncan to obtain a ruling on whether Davey should answer the questions.

Judge Duncan listened to the attorneys but refused to give an off-hand opinion. As a result, this phase of the questioning was postponed until Jan. 27th when the attorneys will file a motion before a judge.

Davey, taking the entire affair calmly and with some humor, said he had testified to other questions but was not satisfied he had to answer questions concerning his personal holdings.

An amusing twist occurred when a deputy sheriff served a summons on Bradley to appear before Davey's attorneys on Jan. 27th for a deposition. This occurred while Davey was giving his testimony.

Harvard observers noted the remarkable fact that not a single comet was discovered during 1938.

City, Unemployment Officials Discuss Contributions.

City Auditor Paul L. Kelley said today that city officials were preparing to meet Wednesday with a representative of the Ohio Unemployment Compensation commission to talk over whether the city must make unemployment compensation contributions for 50 city employes.

Kelley said the city has anticipated that such payments might be required by the commission and in the past two years had set aside $4,500 with which to make the payments if they are necessary.

Kelley said that it had not been entirely decided whether the water, sewer, garbage and parks departments, which were mentioned by the representative who was here yesterday, were proprietary or governmental functions.

It was explained that several Ohio cities now were fighting the payment of contributions and that Mansfield officials had been awaiting the outcome to determine the legality of the procedure.

Kelley added that should the payments be made mandatory, they could be met by asking council to authorize an appropriation of about $3,000 to cover the city's contribution since the law became effective Aug. 7, 1937.

'Bugs' Moran Beats Rap Again, Freed Of Counterfeiting

CHICAGO—(AP)—George "Bugs" Moran, one of the topmost gangsters spawned during the prohibition era, has emerged unscathed again from another tangle with the law.

The one-time arch enemy of Al Capone was acquitted by a jury last night of charges of conspiracy to counterfeit and pass travelers checks.

Also acquitted were Frank Parker, known as the "airplane bootlegger," and Frank Hicketts, a former convict. All were accused of being leaders in a plot to cash $62,000 in counterfeit American Express Travelers checks and to issue a total of $500,000.

Three men who confessed participation in the alleged plot testified against Moran, Parker and Hicketts. Three others were arrested in Pittsburgh last April after the alleged plot was uncovered.

A Farmer's Diary

Buzzing Wood.

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

I ENGAGED the help of my neighbor, with his tractor and buzz saw, to saw my wood. My buzz pile, at the border of the woods, reached ample proportions, and I had several other piles lying about. My two-bitted ax and one man saw had served me well. Now I needed help. A short while after daylight, I drove my car across the snowy field to the woods, to clear a spot to set the saw and tractor. Already I heard the noisy outfit moving slowly from my neighbor's home. Before he reached our place the other workers had arrived. Three men and two boys were there, with a team and bobsled.

In fifteen minutes the two machines had their pulleys aligned, and the saw revolved rapidly, with a whirring, singing sound. One end of a stick of beech was placed upon the movable platform and pushed forward to the prancing saw. The scream of steel on wood rang out shrilly upon the still cold air. A stream of dark yellow sawdust dashed heavily to the ground. The men were galvanized into action.

To feed that screaming saw was no laggard's task. The boys, with their spirited team, whisked away on the sled to bring load after load of long, heavy branches from the piles about the clearing. Two men carried the long lengths to the movable platform, and one heaved the heavy chunks into a pile behind the saw.

"My-o but that beech is hard and horny," the sawyer said, as a splinter darted toward his face. "That'll make a stove roar like a furnace."

The size of the sawed chunks caused the man who threw them back to flex his muscles heavily. One neighbor dropped a weighty block on his toe. I saw him wince and writhe, but he stayed right on the job.

By late afternoon the mound of sawdust was large, the pile of stove-length wood was heaped high, and we were tired. The boys with the sled dragged several loads across the snow to our woodshed door. When evening came, I filled both stoves and sat in comfort while the flames roared up the chimney.

"Who cuts his own wood warms himself twice!"

VARIETY OF INTERESTS WILL OCCUPY LEADERS

Last Week of January Follows Example Set By Earlier Days of Year, Lectures, Programs, Social Events Scheduled.

By FRANCES E. GENSLEY

WITH almost breath-taking rapidity the weeks roll around until a hurried glance at the desk calendar reveals to us that it is already approaching the end of January. The [illegible] weeks have already witnessed a great number of profitable [illegible] entertaining affairs in the club world of Mansfield. [illegible] 're seeking further diversion (and don't mind too much [illegible]ding that New Year [illegible] about sticking to your [illegible]mber of organizations are [illegible] interesting entertainments. Each [illegible]ring of the telephone on the society desk [illegible]ls of something added for the coming week.

Looking Over the Week's Calendar.

Now if you'll just relax a minute there in that big chair beside the fireplace we'll look over the schedule of events before you start to dress for the President's Ball at the Leland. And seeing Monday comes first chronologically, let's look there.

Monday.

Another regularly scheduled session of the Victorian club at the Women's Club will be of interest to several dozen club women Monday when Mrs. Kittie F. Neumann serves as hostess while Mrs. Dwight Weir presents a paper to the group. Goodness knows what thrilling stories some of the Delta Theta Tau girls will have to tell at their session at the Towne House the same evening.

You see a group of the sisters, including Esther Dunham, province officer, and Harriett Roth, delegate, are now in Cincinnati attending the province convention of the sorority, and Monday night they'll all be around to tell the stay-at-homes what happened.

The Misses Virginia Anderson, Mildred Angle and Louise Palmer are hostessing for the combined social and business meeting.

The young matrons who are in the Monday Study club will be the guests of Mrs. H. P. Huston, Hoffman avenue, and the program will be offered by Mrs. Samuel Orr. The same evening Mrs. T. J. McDermott, Park avenue west, wil be hostess to the Little Flower Study club, and Miss Marie Hecht will speak.

Every time you turn around you hear something else about the activities of the University women. Their latest project is the starting of a chorus group. Mrs. E. D. Gibson, music chairman for A. A. U. W., started the group several weeks ago, and now the girls are going to meet Monday night at the library to organize so that they may get together regularly and sing. All the organization members are welcome to join this group, and you don't have to be a Lily Pons to sing with them, Mrs. Gibson emphasized.

In addition to these groups, women of the American Legion auxiliary will meet at the home, the Mary B. Mitchell Tent will have a session with the new officers in charge at Memorial hall, Delta Kappa Gamma girls will be the guests of Miss Virginia Howard, West Fourth street, and the Happy Eight and Gardenia clubs will both have social sessions.

Tuesday.

One of Mansfield's oldest clubs —the Sorosis—will be in session Tuesday evening at the Women's Club when Mrs. A. E. Courtney is hostess. That same evening the Mansfield-Leland hotel will be the scene of a party given by Chi Sigma sorority at which pledges of the group will be welcomed. The committee includes Miss Betty Hammel, Miss Dorothy Crawford, Miss Mary Lou Hout, Mrs. Clifford Heaton, Mrs. Elmer Houston, and Mrs. C. E. Hunter.

Other plans for the day include the American Legion Bridge club session, the meeting of the Charity club with Mrs George Draffan, the study session for the Junior Garden club at Norma Solomon's, a routine gathering of the Ladies [illegible] the Letter Carriers' [illegible] with Mrs. Harry Eyc[illegible] T[illegible]ncre will be a meeting of [illegible] club with Marguerite G[illegible]d session for Navajo [illegible] Mrs Olive Matthes', a [illegible] the Semper Fidelis [illegible] Mrs Clyde Smith's, [illegible]s of the Knotty, Hylo [illegible] M O. B clubs.

Williams will offer the program. All the members of the Philomathian club will take their turns at the meeting with Miss Helen Hosler, Dawson avenue. Each member will give a short book review.

Welfare club members will be the guests of Mrs. A. T. Sneeringer on Hoffman avenue. They will bring soap and towels to the session to distribute in their work.

Scots residing in this city will honor their countryman, Robert Burns, at a public dinner to be given at North Lake park.

Young Wife Wants Praise From Spouse

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

There's a certain girl in my class at school, with whom I'm madly in love, but I don't want her to know it. If she knew that I really love her she'd expect me to ask her to marry me, but I can't marry for several years because I still have two years at college, and then must get a place in business before I ask her.

JUNIOR.

Why not take the girl into your confidence? Tell her you can't make definite plans now, but that you think a great deal of her and hope some day to tell her how much.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I'm 25 years of age, and have been going "steady" with a girl who is a year younger. We've known each other several years, and have gone together for three, one year of which time we've been engaged—ring and all. Just before Christmas she started acting cool, and seemed to change all of a sudden, though why I cannot tell. When I ask her why, she just says she doesn't believe in love any more.

She wants to break off the engagement, but doesn't return the ring, saying that if I don't think our friendship has been worth allowing her to keep the ring, she will give everything back. She'll go out with me whenever I make a date, but is very distant, and seems to have no feeling for anybody. What do you make of this?

WONDERING.

Has your girl had some disillusioning experience to account for her queer behavior? Why doesn't she believe in love anymore? Is there, or has there been someone else in her life, which would account for this change in her point of view?

If you're still considering marriage, you ought to talk it out with her. As to her keeping the ring and other things you have given her, that's up to you. And as to your happiness, should you still consider marrying her, it doesn't look promising to me. I suggest you think it over carefully, before you take the final step.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"Thank you so much," I said quickly, in what Dicky calls my "most arty" tones. "I shall give my husband your message as soon as I get in touch with him. I know he will be immensely relieved, for I know he is quite anxious about the situation."

"Yes, I know he is," the Oxford voice replied. "But everything is quite all right now. Tell him, that, as you say in the States, 'the situation is entirely under control'."

He gave a convincing chuckle at his own gibe, and I promptly gave an answering little laugh.

"I shall repeat your message exactly," I told him demurely.

"Thank you," he returned. "Please remember me kindly to your husband. Good-bye."

"Good-bye," I returned sedately, and hung up the receiver with the sensation of a runner who has reached his goal.

I looked at my wrist watch and found that it lacked but an hour until dinner. The "love-birds," as Dicky calls them, would flit from their nest to mine, at that hour, and present their daily invitation, sincere, I knew, to dine with them. But I also knew that they were subconsciously relieved at my persistent refusal of their bids. They had so pitifully little time to be together, this interlude I had planned for them was necessarily so short, that I had resolved to leave them to themselves as much as was humanly possible.

I had had little appetite for luncheon, and with the relief at Dicky's message had come a realization that I was healthily hungry. I called room service, and ordered a dinner of my favorite viands with broiled chicken as the main dish. I asked that it be brought up as early as possible, and I was at the coffee and dessert stage when their expected knock sounded upon my door.

"Noel Just look at the old meanie!"

Mary's caroling voice held a wounded reproach that sounded most realistic, but I was sure that in her heart there was relief, unacknowledged perhaps, but still present.

"She's almost through with her dinner, and she didn't even give us a chance to ask her to dine with us. All right! Go ahead! Be high hat! See if we care!"

"If you're all through with your exercises, Mary," I told her laughing, "I have some news for you."

She sobered instantly, and both her eyes and Noel's fixed themselves on mine attentively.

"Oh! tell us, please!" she pleaded, and I promptly recited the telephone conversation I had had with Dicky.

"Then that means," Noel said slowly, "that there is very little chance of my father's finding out about this—trip?"

Daintiness Essential Of Grooming

By MME. QUI VIVE

Defects that are suggestive of lack of cleanliness and daintiness of person will classify a girl, put her out of the running. They offend the eye, the spirits and the nostrils of the onlooker. They are degrading, tell the world that there is a lack of intelligence and self respect. They are so unnecessary these days that it seems silly that any human being, man, or woman, should be afflicted with them.

People see, people observe, people judge. The standard of good appearance requires that a woman bathe daily, change her undies, draw fresh stockings over the slender legs. She must keep her shoes polished and heels freshly tapped. She must not stint on the dry cleaner's bill. A soiled neckline of a gown, a spot on a bodice has become a social misdemeanor.

Thirty minutes of bathing, face creaming, hair attentions, nail care each morning and a girl can look the world in the eye. The world will return an admiring smile. A well-groomed woman is a pleasing person.

In order to conserve moisture in pots or boxes in which seeds are planted place a piece of glass covered with a piece of paper over them until seeds germinate. Most seeds prefer darkness for germination.

Keep the center of the room free from furniture. This makes for easy conversation across the room.

Today's Fashion

Sketched in Paris.

By VERA WINSTON

HERE ARE some accessories to the fact of being well-dresed that were sketched at smart places in Paris. The first is a scarf of fine French flannel with embroidery depicting the blue bird. In rose pink with bird in blue, music notes in black, and cage in yellow, it lends a cheery note to dark winter clothes. A new note in powder cases is the golf-size ball of dark red alligator. One side holds the puff, the other side holds the powder and mirror. Below are some washable pique trifles to cheer up a dark frock. Pink pique with embroidered leaf motif is used for a collar and a separate leaf to pin onto pocket or lapel. The band collar of pique has a plaque in front with an embroidered fleur-de-lys. The vestee has embroidered sheaves of wheat tied with little pique bows.

HOROSCOPE

For Sunday, Jan. 22.

Sunday's horoscope is not a particularly auspicious one, holding forebodings of rather unhappy and regrettable circumstances, which may have immediate effect on the private life as well as the physical condition. There may be excitement, irritable or tempestuous conduct, followed by a break in an intimate relation, unless there is determination to sidetrack eccentric indulgences.

Those whose birthday it is are at the brink of a year of unhappiness, disruption and disturbance unless they exercise sound judgment and tact and refrain from erratic or peculiar actions in their most cherished relationships. This might have serious reaction on the nervous or physical wellbeing.

A child born on this day may be eccentric, excitable, highstrung and tempestuous as well as violent and self-indulgent. However, it may enjoy some of "the eccentricities of genius."

For Monday, Jan. 23.

Monday's astrological forecast is a very propitious one, with much promise of expanding business and financial conditions, enhanced personal and social popularity and prestige. It is a time for reaching for high goals, with assurance of attainment, with the recognition and friendly aid from superiors or those in high station.

Those whose birthday it is may feel assured of a prosperous and progressive year, with superiors, employers or those in high places ready to assist with generosity and friendly interest. It is a time for reaching out for well-planned objectives and high personal aspirations.

A child born on this day will be well endowed for success and advanced position, having a fine mind, worthy aspirations and the winning personality contributory to fulfillment of advanced ideals in life.

Numerous Suggestions For Menus

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

Now that the holiday season is over, it's good for both the body and the budget to get back to simple living for a while. To misquote a Broadway play title, it's "kiss the joys goodbye"! While the budget is recuperating from the strain, so can you! Come down to earth from table-heaven with recipe-ideas guaranteed to grant you a happy descent.

Orange candied sweet potatoes will dress up a simple dinner and make it something swell. The recipe requires one-half cup sugar, one cup water, one cup fresh orange juice, one-half teaspoon salt, three tablespoons light corn syrup, one-quarter cup butter, six to eight sweet potatoes and one-half teaspoon grated orange rind. Arrange peeled, uncooked sweet potatoes in a buttered casserole. Combine all remaining ingredients and pour over potatoes. Bake, covered, in a moderate oven (350 F.) until tender, about 30 to 40 minutes. Baste occasionally. Remove lid last 10 minutes to brown or place under the broiler. The fresh orange juice gives an exotic flavor to the familiar sweet potatoes in casserole and makes the sweets something new.

Cauliflower Dish.

Cauliflower surprise is a plain vegetable in a party dress, a good cheerer-upper for a drooping meal. One head cauliflower requires four tablespoons butter and one-half cup chopped Brazil nuts. Remove leaves from cauliflower and soak in cold water half hour. Cook in a very small amount of water with a dash of sugar and salt in a heavy, covered utensil. When tender, drain. Melt one tablespoon of the butter, add Brazil nuts, and when brown add remaining butter. Pour this sauce over cauliflower.

Swell Quick Lunch.

Dutch treat makes a swell quick lunch that is nourishing and nice. The recipe calls for two small onions (chopped), one No. 2 can tomatoes, three eggs (beaten), one-half teaspoon phosphate baking powder, one-half pound cheese and seasonings. Fry onions in butter and add tomatoes which have been strained. Let come to a boil, then add cheese (grated). After cheese has melted add well-beaten eggs, baking powder and seasonings. Scramble these together and serve hot on slices of toast. This is one of the quickest and best savory dishes on record.

Banana applesauce will dress up a pork dinner no end; in fact, will turn it into a banquet. Two large cooking apples, one-half cup water, one small stick cinnamon, one-third cup sugar and three ripe bananas will yield six servings. Core apples and cut in pieces. Add the water and the cinnamon. Cook until apples are soft. Remove cinnamon and strain apples. Add the sugar to the sauce and re-heat to boiling point, while stirring. Cool. Slice the bananas into serving dishes and pour sauce over them.

Skimmed milk contains sugar, protein, minerals and several of the vitamins.

Few jobs are more tiring than filling wash-tubs by hand with a pail. If it is at all possible, use a rubber hose extension that is attached directly to the water faucet and leads to the tub.

SYNOPSIS

Alix Barton is only 16 when her father, a clergyman in a small Maryland town, dies suddenly and her semi-invalid mother soon follows him. She goes to Baltimore and by sacrifice and study fits herself for a secretarial job. The first two years are very lonesome and she worries about her brother Tod who got into trouble with the police of their home town when boys broke into a store and stole some tires. He is now on a tramp steamer and until recently she has been hearing from him from all parts of the world. At the end of two years she meets Tuck Martin, a motherly social worker for thirty years, and they are very happy in their housekeeping arrangements. Alix likes Eddie Barrett whose family was prominent and wealthy before the depression but who is now working for $25 a week. He takes Alix to a party given by Don Lawrence and his debutante daughter Nancy where she meets Kurt Deering and on the instant falls in love with him. Kurt makes a date for dinner two nights later. Eddie asks her how he "stands with" her. She tells his he is her best friend outside of Tuck but she doesn't love him. Her employer becomes infatuated wtih a new girl and calls on her to do Alix's work. Fearing demotion or discharge, Alix resigns. She has a very happy evening with Kurt who is attracted by Alix but can't forget the beautiful actress, Gina Rowland, who jilted him. She meets Nancy's mother, Bernice, who divorced the flirtatious Don. Don asks her to another party and offers her a job.

CHAPTER V.

Kurt drove first to Angela's little restaurant for waffles and strawberry jam but the lights were out and the dark shade had been drawn to the sill.

"She's probably in church," he said, smiling. "When Angela feels the need of church, she goes. Nothing stops her. A hungry army could march by but she'd close up shop and go. Are you hungry, Alix? What do you say to dropping by my apartment? Jaffers, the servant I inherited along with my furniture, is a swell chaperon, and he makes swell coffee. The old boy never goes to bed till I get in anyway. What do you say?"

Make it last a little longer, Alix thought. This is all you will ever have of him, snatched little moments like this . . .

She laughed quietly and said, "Well, since Angela won't feed us . . ."

When he opened the door of his apartment and she stepped inside, the living-room was what she expected—a man's kingdom. It was furnished with old massive pieces made for comfort and there was an oil painting on the wall of a distinguished old man. His father, no doubt. There were books everywhere and a fire burned low in the grate of a brick fireplace.

And there was a photograph of Gina Rowland on the desk. Why did an ache pass through her when the beautiful black eyes seem to greet hers? Defiant eyes that seemed to say, "It doesn't matter who you are or how much you love him because he will always love me." Alix stood still, thinking. "You gave him up. How could you? He loved you and lost you. How could you hurt him so?"

Kurt asked, looking first at the photograph and then at the living girl beside it, "Do you know her? You've heard of her of course. Perhaps you've seen her on the stage."

"No. But today I . . ."

"Today you learned about her and me."

Suddenly he was close to her but Gina's picture was between them. Alix thought, "He likes me but he'll never love me. I'll never reach his heart. He closed his heart when he lost her and he'll never let anybody else in. He has so much to remember about her. When you love and lose, at least you have your memories. I won't even have them."

The moment of intimacy was broken when Jaffers came in with the coffee. Alix poured.

Kurt said, "You're a charming hostess and very ornamental."

She smiled. "In somebody else's house? Don't speak too soon. I may drop the beautiful china."

He sat back and looked at her steadily. "You believe in things, don't you, Alix?"

"I'm the daughter of a clergyman." And glanced at the clock over the fireplace. "And a clergyman's daughter shouldn't be out at this hour and especially in a man's apartment even with Jaffers in the next room. I really must go." The brevity and emptiness of these little minutes hurt so much. . . .

"You're the second girl ever to set foot in here except when I have parties."

Gina had been there. There had been love in this room. Kurt had loved her so much. The strongest men are hurt the worst.

Outside her apartment door he looked down on her and smiled, thinking, "You're sweet and lovely and headed for trouble, Alix. Don can't have a quiet love affair. His have to be spectacular. He has to blow trumpets and let the world know. I can't save you unless I marry you myself and I can't do that. But I can stick around and be on hand if you need me." To her he said, "I'm going to be in New York for a while on business but when I come back, I'll call you. . . ."

"Yes, do, Kurt." And we'll be friends, she thought bitterly. Pals. And you'll never know you've spoiled every other man for me.

The next day it snowed and rained fitfully.

Tuck said, "You're day-dreaming, child."

Alix, lying on the sofa, her knees drawn up, her bright hair disheveled, looked at her.

"Thinking about Kurt and Tod. Where's Tod? Is he cold? Is he hungry? Is he in jail? I feel I've got to do something—but what can I do?"

"If he's in mischief, you'll hear about it."

"From the other side of the world where I can't get to him. And something tells me I shouldn't accept Don's offer." The way Don looked at her, the warmth in his voice, his seemingly casual touch. . . . "Tuck, I'm afraid I'm walking through a red light. But I need that job even if—if I have to pay the fine."

There was no letter from Tod when she looked into the mailbox the next morning before she went downtown. Kurt and Tod, she thought again, two embittered young men, one at love, the other at life, and they were the two men in her life.

When she entered Don's office, Sally Thompson, petite and dark-haired, arose, asked for her name, and led the way to Don's luxurious private office.

He arose and took her hand.

"Good morning, Alix. This is Sally Thompson. She's my Simon Legree. Sally, this is Alix Barton who is going to step into your job when you step into marriage."

Sally smiled and Alix knew she was going to like her. When Sally left, Don settled back in his chair and lighted a cigarette. "You're just in time, Alix. I've been arguing with Sally all morning. I've got to go to New York to a meeting next week and I wanted her to go along to take notes. She refuses to be out of town a single night away from her fiance. Will you go? I'll ask Nancy to come along, too. Of course, secretaries do travel with their employers."

"I wish you'd ask Nancy to go," Alix said. "I'm sure she'd like to."

She ate lunch in a crowded drug store. New York with Don and Nancy. Would Kurt still be there? Would he see Gina in New York? Perhaps they would meet and that would begin again. . . .

But that evening when she opened the door of the apartment, all thoughts of Kurt and Gina were momentarily swept away. She stood still, so still that she seemed not to breathe, seeing Tod in greasy dark trousers and a dark sweater get up and look at her. Was this Tod? Yes, yes, it was! But she would not have known him if she had passed him on the street.

Tuck's crisp voice broke a little. "It's—it's your brother, Alix."

Trembling, she went to him, put her arms around him, and touched his rough face tenderly with her lips.

"Tod!" she cried. "Oh, Tod, where have you been?" and she saw in an instant how four years had altered him. His face was rough and there was an ugly scar over his right eye. His hands were red and rough. He was haggard and thin and looked much more than four years older.

"I've been working my way back," he said. He gave a wry smile and looked at his hands. "Peeled potatoes to get back."

"I've been terribly worried about you. And now so excited . . . But I'm so glad to see you. Aren't you glad to be back?"

"I've been in town three days. I—I was ashamed to come." He looked away, frowning. "These are all the clothes I have. I was ashamed to come in these clothes and no money and no job."

Tuck got up and placed her hands on her broad hips.

"That's three days worrying you might have spared your sister, young man. You look as if you need a substantial meal more than you need new clothes. I'm going to start it right now. I won't need you, Alix."

"You gave me such a shock," Alix said when Tuck went into the kitchen. "But where have you been these three days? Why didn't you come directly to me?" Was he in trouble? Was he running away from something? The questions reproached her. She shouldn't think such things.

"I've been living with another sailor." He turned his head and looked at her and his eyes deepened. "The cops aren't after me, if that's what you mean. I'm back—but what am I going to do now? I won't live on you." He glanced hastily around the room. "You've done pretty well for yourself."

"You can stay here and sleep on the sofa, Tod. Tuck won't mind. And you'll like her. I'll buy you some clothes tomorrow, and after you've rested try to find a job." Knowing how stubborn and independent he was she asked timidly, "Would you like that, Todd? A clean, respectable job, home, friends?"

"I don't know anything but the sea. You'd be ashamed of me."

"Oh, don't say that. You know I've begged you to come back. Don't feel that you're an outcast because of that one thing that happened. You were very young then, Tod. You won't see any of the boys you knew then. It's all forgotten. You shouldn't be bitter toward people."

His mouth twitched. "Where I've been . . ."

"Where have you been?"

"Don't ask me, Alix."

Where had he been? What had they done to him? What made him think that physical strength was one's only asset against a world he hated? He had seen only the worst side of it and people whose lives were finished, when his had been thwarted before it had really begun. There were others like him, she thought. Wandering leftovers of their generation.

He ate ravenously. Alix and Tuck stinted themselves to give him extra portions. And Alix's heart ached with pity she dared not show. "I don't know how to cope with him," she thought. "If I make him angry, if he suspects I'm sorry for him, he'll run away again and I may never see him again. There must be a place for him somewhere and a decent beginning."

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

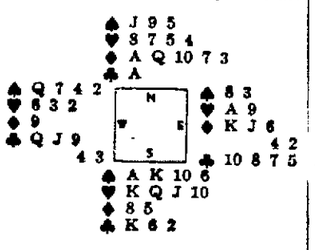
"The Authority on Authorities"

SHOW ONE SUIT FIRST

Whenever you have two suits worth showing to your partner, it is usually sound tactics to tell him about one of them first. If you don't, you may never get a chance to tell him about the other one and give him a chance to choose the one which fits his hand the better. Juming to 2-No trump after his opening suit bid is a poor way to show your strength if you have two good four-card majors. It may result in your never having an opportunity to disclose the suit which is the best contract for your side.



(Dealer: North. Neither side vulnerable.)

After North bid 1-Diamond on this deal, South called 2-No trump, North 3-Diamonds, South 3-Spades and North 3-No trump, the only bid he could possibly make at that stage. West led the club Q, and South didn't have a chance to make his contract. No matter what he did, the defenders were certain to collect three tricks in clubs, plus one in each major suit.

"Why didn't you show your fine hand with a bid of 2-Spades?" asked North. "Then after my 3-Diamonds, you could have bid 3-Hearts and I would have taken you to four."

"I don't like to bid that way unless my suits are of five cards," responded South. "If I have only four-card suits, I like to bid the 2-No trump first, after which you will know that any suit I name is only a four-carder."

North conceded that this was perhaps a fair idea if there was only one suit to show, but if there were two, especially both of them majors, one should be shown first.

"But isn't that likely to fool my partner nito thinking I have five-carders?" asked South.

"Not if, when he hears that second suit, he realizes you may have had a pair of four-carders and governs himself accordingly." North was convinced.

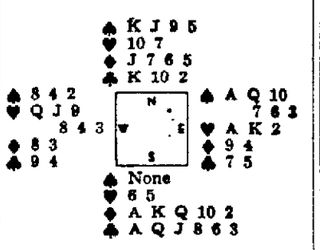
Monday's Problem.



With a spade led against South's minor suit contract, why is he better off with diamonds as trumps than with clubs?

Tygers Lose to New Philadelphia Cagers on Foul Line

F... 2 of the Mansfield high ... rs to convert more than fo... s at the foul line cost th... pportunity to gain state-... gnition by defeating the ... w Philadelphia quintet ...

Russ Murphy's Tygers wasted nine shots at the black stripe as the undefeated Quakers hung up a 26 to 24 victory on their tiny home floor before 800 spectators to halt a Mansfield three-game winning streak.

Guard Breaks Tie.

New Philadelphia, runner-up in the state finals last year, found the Mansfield defense difficult to solve and had several uncomfortable moments before Jack Castignola, its fleet little guard, with two minutes to play, drove in for an easy shot that broke a 24-all tie and provided the winning points.

Mansfield strived desperately in these minutes to knot the score again, but couldn't locate the basket and New Philly finally gained possession of the ball and stalled until the gun.

It was the Quakers' 11th consecutive triumph, and the fourth time this season that they have emerged with a two-point win.

The Tygers, underdogs in the important tussle, matched the winners with goals throughout and forged ahead, 24 to 23, late in the final period, but the court, about the size of the Mansfield Y. M. C. A. hardwood, was too small for the Mansfielders to work their offensive plays.

Seven of the 10 Mansfield baskets were scored from midcourt against the clever New Philadelphia zone defense. Only twice was the team able to break in for under-the-basket shots.

With the Tygers leading by a one-point margin, Glen Baker, lanky forward, stepped up to the foul line and slipped in a shot to tie the score a few seconds before Castignola tallied the winning basket.

Incidentally, it was the only goal collected by the stellar guard in the second half against the neat defensive work on Don Rose.

The Quakers jumped into the lead in the opening minutes of the initial stanza, but long shots by Jack Dugger and Jack Lyons gave Mansfield an advantage it held until shortly before the intermission.

That lead seemed to act as a stimulant to the Tygers and they performed in spectacular fashion against the heavily favored hosts. Mansfield knotted the score in the third and near the end of the chapter had again secured a lead which it held until those fatal two minutes in the fourth frame.

Mansfield led, 8 to 5, in the first frame, and New Philadelphia forged into a 14 to 13 lead at halftime, but the Tygers gained a 20 to 18 lead going into the final quarter.

Earl Fisher, whose fine floorwork was a feature of the Quakers' play, established the individual scoring pace in the setto with nine points, while Lyons set the Mansfield tempo with eight.

Stars on Defense.

Tommy Scott's brilliant floorwork and his ability to break up the New Philadelphia passing attack held a share of the spotlight last night. Numerous times in the second half the youngster intercepted the Quakers' desperate passes to stop their attack cold.

In a basketball game that rivaled football for roughness, Galion high's Orangemen romped to a 42 to 23 victory over Shelby on the Whippets' court last night in an N. C. O. tussle. Officials called 39 fouls, 23 on Shelby.

Incidentally, the victory was the first of the N. C. O. season for the Orangemen, who stepped into a tie for fifth place with their vanquished foe.

Held scoreless in the first period, Shelby never figured seriously in the ball game. The Whippets trailed 10 to 0 at the completion of the opening period and 19 to 7 at the half.

Shelby outscored the visitors in the third quarter, but managed to reduce Galion's huge intermission lead by only one point.

Every Galion player collected two or more points, with Beck high with eight points, Lehman led the Whippets with the same number.

Shelby's reserves whipped the Galion seconds, 33 to 22, in the first game.

Mephisto Wins In Short Order; Ex-Mansfielder Takes Opener

AS FAR as Silent Rattan is concerned, Mr. Mephisto is still the champion of all light-heavyweights.

The veteran Toledo deaf mute gave the newly crowned king a tussle during the greater part of their titular match in the Armory last night but the Great Mephisto's "pile-driver" again carried too much dynamite.

Mephisto butted Rattan's cranium into the canvas just 25 minutes after the match got under way, and the fun ended right then and there.

Rattan was unable to return for the second fall, and Mephisto not only defended his title successfully, but kept his record of not losing a fall in the Mansfield ring in over three years intact.

The Toledoan was a willing mixer, but Mephisto packed too many guns.

A newcomer in one of the preliminary matches proved to be a former Mansfield boy, and he showed the fair-sized crowd some fancy grappling.

The ex-Mansfielder is Jack Zarnas, a former All-Ohioan at Wittenberg. Zarnas, the son of Nick Zarnas, now of Columbus and cousin of Gus Zarnas, late of Ohio State guard, received Referee Clarence Miller's decision after 30 minutes with Cleve Welch of Cleveland in the opening match.

Fans took a fancy to Zarnas, who left the city several years ago to make his home in Youngstown, although they did not know he was formerly of here. Promoter Tim Nolan plans to bring him back for another appearance.

In the wildest match on the card, Jumping Bryan Bey, a light-heavyweight importation from Turkey, won in straight falls over Bill Brooks of Boston.

Bald-headed and mustached, Bey had the fans on his neck right at the start, and he encouraged the boos. He spent about as much time outside of the ring as he did in, tangled frequently with Referee Miller and, generally speaking, employed holds that even the mat sport does not permit.

A couple of times during the evening, Bey led the match among the spectators in the ringside seats, but Brooks was held in the ring by the referee to keep the grappling where it belonged.

Bey took the first fall with a crab hold in 15 minutes and finished the match with a body slam in 11.

Bowling

NO SCORING RECORDS were threatened by bowlers in action in leagues at the Meder alleys last night.

Heading the individual assault was a 639 by Blank of the Iron Finishing No. 1 team of the Ohio Brass league. He opened with a 639 and closed with a 234.

The only other big score rolled in the Ohio Brass circuit was an even 600 by Cheney of the Core quintet.

Brig Young of No. 5, Moose Home league, pounded out a 624, while Lanning, sr., of No. 3, opening with a 245, shot a 620. Renner, sporting a 245 middle game, rolled an even 600 for No. 2.

R. Willis of the Lusterboy Tops, Tappan Stove league, registered a 604.

Mansfield's Set If Lima's Ready

FINDLAY — (AP) — The Ohio State league hoped today to place baseball franchises in Lima and Mansfield before its season opens May 10. Four teams, Findlay, Fremont, Tiffin and Fostoria, are now signed up.

Atty. Norman Cohen of Toledo is ready to sponsor a team at Mansfield if Hank Rigney and Michael Disalle, both of Toledo, can obtain a field in Lima to round out a six-club circuit, it was reported at a league meeting here last night.

If suitable arrangements cannot be made at Lima, League President Paul Shank said Marion and Galion were being considered for a franchise. The league will meet in Tiffin Feb. 20 in an effort to complete arrangements for a 130-game schedule.

Madison Runs Winning Streak to Seven Games

Fendrick's Cagers Continue March to County League Title With 21-12 Win Over Ontario.

MADISON high school's rampaging Rams moved a notch nearer the Richland County league title last night when they turned back the challenge of the Springfield township basketeers of Ontario, 21 to 19, on the home hardwood in a game that produced few thrills.

It was the seventh straight county league triumph for Coach Al Fendrick's proteges, whose only defeats were administered by Loudonville and Logan in non-league tilts.

Before the largest crowd to pack into the Madison gym this season, the Rams did not produce any spectacular basketball as they registered their second win over Coach Orv Kibler's Warriors. Ontario also appeared off-form.

The Madison defense yielded only four baskets, and the Warriors trailed all the way. Neither team showed any signs of doing any fancy shooting in the first period which ended with Madison on top by a 3 to 2 margin.

Ontario again collected only two points in the second period, but the Rams obtained seven to hold a 10 to 4 advantage at the half, which the visitors never threatened.

The Kiblermen showed up much better in the second half, but they were unable to match Madison point for point. The Rams held a 17 to 9 edge going into the fourth period.

Joe Miller was the high scorer for the winners with seven points. Tommy Hudson colected two of the four Ontario buckets. Mats Hager, Ontario scoring leader, failed to get a point from the field, but contributed a pair of free throws.

The Madison reserves edged the Ontario seconds, 16 to 15, in the preliminary tilt.

Butler Five Makes It Two Straight.

COACH BOB BURGETT'S Bulldogs of Butler high seem to have regained the scoring power that marked them as one of the pre-season favorites in the Richland county league race.

Butler, after wading through seven contests without a defeat, dropped two in a row, but came back to defeat Lucas earlier this week and last night made it two in a row by dumping Lexington high, 36 to 25, on the Minutemen's floor.

Burgett's proteges had a scare, but staged a thrilling last-period rally to break a 19-all deadlock and march on to victory.

Little Kenny Miller and Wendall Ward, the latter one of the leaders in the individual scoring race, contributed three baskets apiece in the fourth frame to lead the way.

Lexington high went ahead, 6 to 5, in the opening period, and increased it to a 15 to 10 advantage at the half. And then Butler began to click and knotted the score at 19-all going into the fourth.

Ward and Dick Roberts, Lexington center, rang the hoops for 14 points each to set the scoring pace for the evening. Miller added nine to the Butler total.

The Butler seconds walloped the Lexington reserves, 20 to 10, in the opening game.

BLONDS RUN UP LIGHT BILL FOR MOVIE-MAKERS

Feature Film Costs $20,000 More to Photograph If One Of Them Has Lead Role.

(By Associated Press)

HOLLYWOOD — In the movies blonds are more expensive than brunets.

Gregg Toland, Samuel Goldwyn's chief cenematographer, has taken a clinical interest in the matter and reduced facts to figures. It mosts approximately $20,000 more to photograph a blond star than a brunet in a feature length film, Toland says.

Toland, currently working on "Wurthering Heights," which stars Merle Oberon, a brunet, has a gadget called as "electric eye" which measures in milliamps the amount of light players absorb.

"Blonds require more intricate arrangements of lights and more of them," says Toland. "They seem to absorb set illumination and must have at least 50 per cent more side lamps than a brunet.

Takes More Time.

"I should say it takes 30 per cent more time and 50 per cent more lighting equipment. Conservatively, it runs about $20,000 more in lighting costs when the leading lady is a blond.

Toland refused to predict that the movie blond would become passe but considers it significant that the straw-haired maidens, once considered MUST on the studio star lists, aren't economic assets—from a technical viewpoint. And the fact remains that there are fewer flaxen-topped feminine stars, natural or otherwise, than formerly.

In 1925, 83 per cent of the movie femmes were blonds. Today they can almost be counted on your fingers—but Toland says the drop can't all be charged to movie economy.

MEET ON ROADS

Townships' Trustees, County Heads Confer Wednesday.

Trustees from six of Richland county's 18 townships are scheduled to confer Wednesday with county commissioners and County Engineer Howard C. Sword on their road construction and maintenance programs for 1939.

The county engineer said he expected the trustees to submit their road programs for the year, indicating how much they plan to spend for improvements and maintenance.

Following conferences with all the trustees at the courthouse, the 1939 road program will be set up by the county, the engineer said. Trustees from other townships will be interviewed at later dates.

Wednesday's schedule includes conferences beginning at 9 a. m. and continuing until 3 p. m. in the commissioners' office. The schedule follows:

Worthington township, 9 a. m.; Troy township, 10 a. m.; Washington township, 11 a. m.; Jefferson township, 1 p. m.; Perry township, 2 p. m.; Monroe township, 3 p. m.

SENT TO PRISON

Defendants In Panama Canal Spy Case Get 2 Years.

CRIUTOBAL, C. Z.—(INS)—Two of the German defendants in the Panama Canal spy case received sentences of two years in Gamboa penitentiary after Federal Judge Bunk Gardner overruled their motion for a new triai.

Defense counsel announced that he would appeal the case in the federal court of appeals in New Orleans.

Sentenced were Hans Schackow, 26, said to be the leader of the quartet who allegedly took photographs in Fort Randolph last October, and Renst Kuhrig, 29. Remaining to be tried are Fraulein Ingeborg Gutmann, 19, and Gesberg Gross, 26. They are being tried individually.

Any Wonder Freddy's Pleased

Fredric March looks terribly pleased in this scene from "Trade Winds," as who wouldn't with gardenias under his ears and a beauteous brunet in his arms? The lady is not Heddy Lamarr but the youngest of the Bennett sisters. Joan and Freddy chase each other half way around the world in the extravagantly staged Walter Wanger film which opens at the Madison at midnight tonight.

BUCYRUS — County Treasurer Matt W. Quay announced Wednesday, Feb. 1, as the date of the opening of the tax books for the collection of real estate assessments for the first half of the 1938 tax year. New rates announced in November will be effective for the first time at this collection. No date for closing of the books has been set.

ORDERS REFEREE

Appeals Court Acts In Suit Seeking Foreclosure.

Appointment of a referee to make a finding of facts in a case in which Lottie Culler, Mansfield, seeks a foreclosure judgment against a Mansfield property had been ordered today by the Fifth district court of appeals which heard the case last Tuesday.

The court's order gives Wade Culler and his wife, Mrs. Bernice Culler, defendants, 10 days to plead and states that unless the parties agree on a referee by Feb. 20, one will be named by the court.

The case was appealed by the plaintiff after a common pleas court decision held that a property transferred from Wade Culler to his wife cannot be sold to pay a $1,152 judgment against Culler.

Contending that the transfer was made after the judgment was granted in order to protect the property, the plaintiff asked the court to null the deed and order the lot sold at sheriff's sale.

THEATERS

DEVOTED fans of Norma Shearer, accustomed to seeing the lovely star in the most dignified roles, will probably gasp when they see her as an acrobat in tights hanging by her toes from a trapeze in 'Idiot's Delight." Throughout most of the picture she wears a very blond wig, affects a Russian accent and uses a cigaret holder this long. Hollywood looks upon the picture as one of the most pretentious of the year.

"Trade Winds."

When Walter Wanger made "Trade Winds" he went the limit in preparing it and casting the picture. Dorothy Parker, Alan Campbell and the short story writer, Frank Adams, wrote the dialog for it, and the settings required backgrounds from a dozen different countries. The cast is unusually long and is topped with Fredric March, Joan Bennett, Ralph Bellamy, Ann Sothern, Sidney Blackmer and many well known featured players. The story concerns a chase half way around the world in which a handsome detective, who has a way with women, follows a girl wanted for murder. Miss Bennett makes a stunning brunet when she dons a black wig. "Trade Winds" opens at midnight tonight at the Madison.

"Son of Frankenstein."

Basil Rathbone, who has yet to turn in a mediocre performance, no matter what kind of a part he has had, distinguishes the role of the son of Frankenstein which he plays in the film of that name at the Ohio. The picture opened there today for a week. Rathbone is shown following in his father's footsteps, intrigued by the thought of bringing back to life the great monster destroyed by lightning in the second of the Frankenstein films, but beset with fear at the results. Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi and Josephine Hutchinson head the cast.

"Vivacious Lady."

One of the best of the Ginger Rogers films made away from the Rogers-Astaire combination is 'Vivacious Lady," opening at the Park tomorrow. Miss Rogers not only sings and dances to entertain her audiences but stages a knock-down-and-drag-out fight with her rival in this this story of a serious college professor who marries a night club singer and brings her back to a little college town. James Stewart is the professor. 'Fighting Thoroughbreds" is the second feature.

"Letter of Introduction."

When lists were being compiled for the best pictures of the year just ending, "Letter of Introduction" was a runner-up. In it Charlie McCarthy has his "biggest" role, and of course Edgar Bergen is there too. Adolphe Menjou, Andrea Leeds and George Murphy work out the story of a great matinee idol who tries to keep secret the identity of his daughter. "King of Alcatraz," with Gail Patrick, Lloyd Nolan, Harry Carey and J. Carrol Naish, shares the Ritz bill with "Letter of Introduction."

"Perfect Specimen."

Alcatraz, which has figured frequently in the headlines recently, is also being played up in the movies, with the result that there are two films based on the prison in Mansfield Sunday. "Alcatraz Island" will be shown at the Majestic Sunday and Monday along with a lively comedy, "The Perfect Specimen," in which Errol Flynn, who's never been kissed, learns about women from Joan Blondell. Such funsters as Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins and Edward Everett Horton keep the comedy moving.

RAIL FORECASTS CHEER TRADERS IN WEAK MART

General Upturn In Orders For Supplies, Materials Noted By Observers.

BULLETIN

NEW YORK—(AP)—Stock market prices slumped in the last hour of trading today and leading issues lost by as much as $1 to $4 per share or more. Brokers were none too sure of an explanation for the selling movement, which developed suddenly and took hold so rapidly that the ticker tape got behind floor trading. The most common reason assigned was the dismissal of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht yesterday as head of the German reichsbank.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Leading stocks continued in reverse gear in today's market dealings.

Losers of fractions to a point included Chrysler, Anaconda, Standard Oil of N. J., Glenn Martin, United Aircraft, Consolidated Edison, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem and General Motors. American Telephone and Loew's managed to post modest advances.

Those who have been following the rail and railway equipment stocks noted forecasts that the carriers this year would spend somewhat more than the $395,000,000 put out for supplies and materials in 1938. A general upturn in orders and inquiries for equipment was said to have been observed.

On the side of electrical machinery shares were reports manufacturers in this field expected a rise in the output of this industry of about 25 per cent over last year's volume.

tion of parking meters "might" provide the necessary funds.

Mayor Hunter said he and Nist had "gone over" the report with Chief Bates and although there was considerable discussion on the matter of more rigid traffic enforcement, he had commended the chief for "some" of the activities of the police.

These he said, were the recovery of stolen property made by the detective bureau and the recovry of stolen automobiles which showed an increase over the previous year.

The meeting of officers of the police department Monday, Bates said, will be held for the discussion of a general "tightening up" of the traffic regulations.

Youth Convicted In Officer's Slaying Arrives Here.

Charles Dryer, alias Ford, one of the two convicted in the slaying of State Highway Patrolman George A. Conn, today entered the Ohio state reformatory to begin a one-to-20-year sentence on a manslaughter charge.

The 20-year-old colored Pittsburgher was brought here today by authorities of Harrison county where he was sentenced on Jan. 12 by Judge B. W. Moore.

Bernard Masulla, 22, also of Pittsburgh, was the only one of the four men accused of Conn's slaying to be convicted by a jury. Dryer was tried by a three-judge court.

Masulla is serving a life sentence in the Ohio penitentiary. Peter Serino, 22, and Booker Johnson, 42, were acquitted at Cadiz, where the trials were held.

Patrolman Conn was killed near Freeport, on Sept. 27, 1937, when he stopped an automobile to question its occupants.

Ford testified against each of the men whom he said he was associated with in white slave traffic. He named Masulla as the "trigger man."

Bill Proposes Military Training for CCC Enrollees

WOULD TRAIN 300,000 FOR ARMY SERVICE

House Chairman Prepares to Introduce Measure Asking Compulsory Program.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Chairman Andrew May of the house military affairs committee today disclosed that he had completed the draft of a bill calling for compulsory military training of 300,000 youths as part of the CCC enrollment program.

The measure will be introduced in the house next week, he said. It would provide that each CCC enrollee be required to take not less than two hours nor more than five hours of military training each week.

An administration bill introduced yesterday would make the Civilian Conservation Corps a permanent agency of the government. May said he was taking his step independent of the administration.

Plan Wins Support.

A check of his committee, which is handling the bulk of President Roosevelt's $532,000,000 rearmament program, showed that a number of members favor compulsory military training for the CCC camps. Questioned recently at a press conference, Mr. Roosevelt pointed out that proposals of this nature had been made before, but had been turned down.

May's disclosure came as congress prepared to give the navy's plan to equip the tiny Pacific island of Guam for eventual fortification a thorough airing next week. Mr. Roosevelt, for the second time this week, stressed at his press conference yesterday that the present plans do not call for fortification, but simply military improvements.

Chairman Vinson of Georgia of the house naval affairs committee said his committee would start public hearings Wednesday on the navy's air base program, and that at least two days would be devoted to exploring the Guam issue. The opening witnesses will be Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, and Rear Admiral Arthur Hepburn, author of the plan for a new network of air bases reaching from the little Pacific outpost of Puerto Rico in the Caribbean sea.

Regarding his proposal to train CCC youths for military service, May said:

"One of greatest defense needs is proper training facilities. The CCC enrollees are already under the direction of army officers, and I see no reason why military training could not be given them in addition to the other educational work they do. The cost of the venture would be very small and the results should be very desirable."

City's 6th Annual Birthday Ball To Be Held Tonight

Although President Roosevelt's birthday anniversary is not until Jan. 31, Mansfield will officially celebrate it tonight when the sixth annual ball for the benefit of the infantile paralysis fund is staged at the Mansfield-Leland ballroom.

The event here is a week ahead of hundreds of similar affairs that are being given throughout the nation with a two-fold purpose: to honor the chief executive who staged a gallant fight to overcome the ravages of the disease, and to provide funds to fight the disease both nationally and locally.

Bob Richards and his Westinghouse orchestra will play for the dance and at 10:30 a five-act floor show will be presented with three home talent acts and two professional acts from the Greystone night club

A 10-year-old dancer of unusual ability, Donna Miller of Attica, Miss Jean Schill, a pupil of the Marguerite Speas dance studio, in an eccentric dance, and Ralph Smith, Galion ventriloquist, are the amateur acts in a diversified floor show.

[illegible] will be sold at the door, [illegible] to City Solicitor Marion [illegible] chairman. The admission is $1.50 a couple or $1 [illegible]n. Persons desiring to [illegible] to the fund who are unable to attend the dance may send [illegible]ributions to Ward.

FINED $10 ON TRAFFIC CHARGE

SHELBY—Charged with reckless driving, Ira Post of R. D. 2, was fined $10 and costs in Mayor D. B. Young's court Friday. Post had been arrested earlier this week on an affidavit filed by Police Chief Leroy Coffey when the car which Post was driving hit a car parked on North Broadway avenue owned by A. F. Weddell of this city.

Police stated that Post failed to stop following the accident. The car was traced by police through a license number taken down by witnesses of the accident. Post told the court that he didn't remember "clearly" what happened following the accident. Pleading guilty, Post testified that he had had a "couple" of drinks before the accident occurred. Post agreed to pay the damages to the Weddell car.

Mrs. Ethel Woodworth, employed on the WPA record project at City building and a camera fan, has something she values as highly as a prize-winning print. It's an acknowledgement from the social secretary of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor for a Christmas greeting card she sent them. It arrived in the mail yesterday and said: "The Secretary is desired by the Duke and Duchess of Windsor to express their grateful appreciation of your Christmas greetings which they warmly reciprocate."

About this time of the year some people begin to wonder what they'll do for a vacation next summer, but not Glen Leinard, 805 Bowman street. He knows. He is going to sail down the Muskingum river to the Ohio, down the Ohio to the Mississippi and down the "Father of Waters" to the Gulf of Mexico. Leinard is constructing his own sail boat of cypress, which will be a trim little 16-foot craft when it is finished. He expected to have his boat and sails finished by the middle of May and with Lewis Porter, 14 Harmon street, will launch it in the Coshocton river which flows into the Muskingum.

Chub De Wolfe, whose column, "Among the Folks," appears daily in the Toledo Blade, mentioned a former Mansfield man, now a prominent Toledo resident, the other day. He referred to Louis A. Mennel whom many Mansfielders remember. "History says there was a big snowstorm in Mansfield 61 years ago Jan. 11," Wolfe wrote. "Louis A. Mennel chairman of the Mennel Milling company was born there on that day."

Three Mansfield aviation enthusiasts are due to arrive home by plane from Atlanta, Ga., where they went earlier this week with the intention of playing golf with Bobby Jones, golf's most famous personage. The golf idea was a side issue with the trio who were in Knoxville, Tenn., on business. There they met a friend who enticed them to Atlanta. Sending telegrams home explaining that they would be delayed, the trio went on south. In the group are J. R. "Bud" Harrington, Dr. Frank H. Maxwell and Dr. Paul A. Stoodt. Harrington is piloting the plane.

SEES PLUMBING AS HEALTH KEY

Research Expert Lauds Move To Revise City Code at Meeting Here.

The neighborhood plumber was visualized as one of the greatest safeguards of human life by Edward L. Penfrase of the Copper and Brass Research association of New York, who addressed 100 plumbers, sanitary and health officers and city officials at the Chamber of Commerce assembly rooms last night.

Penfrase lauded health authorities for their efforts to bring about revisions in the city's plumbing code that would provide immunity from contamination in Mansfeld's water supply.

A moton picture which showed the necessity for remedial measures for the control of water borne diseases was shown in connection with the talk.

He referred to the Chicago epidemic which resulted he said in the death of 41 persons from dysentery contracted through back-syphonage from improper plumbing and cited the need for a more stringent plumbing code.

"Mansfield is receiving the best supply of water possible because the local health authorities constantly test the water until it reaches the building curb line," Penfrase said. "And then the responsibility lies with the plumber. Contamination can result within the building through defective plumbing. Cross connections in plumbing cause pollution."

He asserted that antiquated plumbing methods must go and urged that copper and brass fittings be used in place of lead fittings for the distribution of water.

"The public can demand the installation of proven equipment," he said, "but the responsibility to see that it is used lies with the plumber."

Fred Haag, city plumbing inspector, presided at the meeting.

3-DAY GASCO FOOD INSTITUTE TO OPEN TUESDAY AT OHIO THEATER

Plans were completed today for the presentation of the 1939 Mansfield Gasco Food institute Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday mornings at the Ohio theater. Sessions, under the direction of Miss Louise McFarland, food and cooking authority, will open at 9 a. m. each morning.

The institute is made possible by the co-operation of the merchants of Mansfield, the Ohio Fuel Gas company and The News-Journal.

An entirely new series of food programs will be featured. Miss McFarland will be assisted by Miss Pauline Schofield, home service representative of the Gas company, whose menus and recipes appear regularly on The News-Journal food page.

All properties of the institute, all details and arrangements for the event are in charge of James Terry, Gasco Food institute manager.

The first day's program will be a "Cooking Cavalcade," which takes the audience back to old-fashioned kitchen methods and develops an interesting comparison between them and today's stream-lined kitchens.

"Utopia" is the title of the second day's program. This will develop an unusual phase of cooking wherein the man of the house takes over the kitchen. Terry, institute manager, will prepare some he-man dishes. This program is designed to appeal especially to men who like to prepare a stag snack for friends.

The remainder of the second day's session will be devoted to speed cooking with tests made against time.

What does the future mean to cooking? What new horizon lies ahead of the housewife, the woman who presides over the modern kitchen? These questions will be answered by the third day's program which has been titled, appropriately, "New Horizons."

There is no admission charge and women of Mansfield and surrounding towns are invited to attend this modern presentation of "art of cookery."

Chamber Imposes 30-Minute Limit on Speeches to Cut Down on Oratory.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Limitation of debate in the senate assured administration leaders today of a final vote early next week on the confirmation of Harry L. Hopkins to be secretary of commerce.

Recessed until Monday, the senate agreed to allow each senator to speak but once and for not more than 30 minutes when it convenes. Several senators still desire to speak on the nomination and the week-end recess may precipitate more oratory. But a vote late Monday was anticipated.

Concede Favorable Vote.

Republican and Democratic critics of Hopkins, engaged for two days in a bitter denunciation of the former Works Progress administrator and the Roosevelt administration, conceded that the vote would be favorable. They claim a maximum of only 30 votes.

Sen. Walter F. George (D., Ga.), who successfully overcame administration opposition, including a personal speech by President Roosevelt, in last fall's primary, threatened to bring that campaign into the controversy Monday.

George announced that he would vote against Hopkins' confirmation, contending that Hopkins had managed relief badly and that he had injected himself into political campaigns.

Two other senators who were re-elected despite administration opposition—Sens. Guy M. Gillette (D., Ia.) and Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.)—denounced Hopkins yesterday, but said that they would vote for his confirmation.

"One of the last men on earth I'd want in my cabinet is Harry Hopkins," Gillette said, "but the president wants him and has the right to have him."

Tydings contended that Hopkins had been guided "in his mistakes by a strong unseen hand," and that to vote against his nomination to the cabinet would be "punishing the child rather than the parent."

Comment On Dilemma Congress Finds Itself In On Cut In WPA Funds

—By JANE WILLIAMS

THE new Congress is in what Andy might well describe as a "picklement." And not the least of its woes and problems is the WPA appropriation from which the House has already slashed 125 million dollars.

The most powerful forces in the country are backing up the president in his demands for his original figure of more than three quarters of a billion dollars—which will cover WPA needs for only a few months. The governors of states and mayors of towns and cities and millions of workers themselves are lined up with the president.

But opposite them are millions of worried citizens and thousands of big and little business men who are extremely interested in seeing steps made toward a substantial recovery, a curtailment of expenditures that have plunged this country into a hitherto unheard-of indebtedness and which points toward national bankruptcy and inflation.

Proponents for the larger sum point out that if $125,000,000 is slashed off the original sum, it will take a million workers off WPA.

NO one wants to see that happen —unless by some miracle they could all secure jobs in private industry—for there are already more than ten million unemployed in the United States. No one would ask to have a million people thrown out of work in the middle of the winter, even though they know that if a halt isn't called somewhere, sometime, ten times ten million people will be in need.

But the point that makes for dissension on the whole subject is unnecessary and wasteful extravagance in the entire WPA set-up. Even the reticent Mr. Hopkins reluctantly admitted that there probably is a lot of money wasted in WPA. And there is a pretty widespread conviction that the $725,000,000 if conscientiously administered, could still be made to care for the entire three million WPA workers for two months.

Figure it out for yourself: the president says that $125,000,000 represents work for 1,000,000 for two months, which is only $125 per worker. But the reduced figure of $725,000,000 for the entire WPA force of 3,000,000 represents $241 per worker.

As one commentator says: "It is not an issue of dollars vs. human needs, but an issue of short-sighted extravagance."

AND that is just one of the problems confronting Congress—but one that should be settled without delay in order to avoid unnecessary suffering.

Another one of much more far-reaching consequences is the country's foreign policy. Congress will be the battleground on which will be decided whether we stay in our own back yard and continue our plan of self-isolation, or whether we venture out to join the hellzapoppin in Europe.

And a country's "foreign policy" never loomed up so importantly as in the past months when Great Britain's Mr. Chamberlain demonstrated what can happen when the wrong policy is pursued.

* * *

LADY ASTOR expresses regret that the United States can't be included in the British empire. Has the former Virginia belle forgotten that this country once WAS a part of the empire?

And if the tax on tea hadn't made us mad enough to get out, Sister Chamberlain's visits with Hitler and Mussolini would have turned the trick.

* * *

IT is pretty difficult to take a stern view of Jack Benny and George Burns as smugglers. Think of the times you Canadian visitors brought back a bottle of Scotch without declaring it, or a few pieces of linen beyond your $100 allowance.

Which is just as serious an offense against the government as theirs. That is, technically.

FAIR ENOUGH!

An Answer to the Attack of Labor Review on Story of Tom Mooney's Release

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—The Labor Review, of Minneapolis, prints on page one of its current edition a strangely interesting suggestion. It says that a recent issue of this column indicates that your correspondent has volunteered to provoke Tom Mooney or his friends to words or actions that would be discrediting. As to whether this is prophecy or warning, the paper goes no further. Mussolini has sometimes said that if the press of one country or another didn't hush he might be provoked to something.

The column in question was a piece pointing out that Mooney was freed not by the Communists, whose leader, Josef Stalin, Mooney admires, and who would have shot him quickly in similar circumstances as an opponent of the existing regime, but by the American people and the workings of the American system.

It also pointed out that Mooney is not the leader or even a leader of American labor, and insisted that his release was a victory for the American people and American rights and a rebuke to the Communists and their way—which would have been to kill him.

Mooney himself has expressed approval of the Communist way, for in a conversation with your correspondent in San Quentin about a year ago he justified the execution of the political heretics in Moscow on the ground that they were enemies of the state. He himself held Leon Trotsky guilty of the same capital offense without trial. He said Trotsky, too, was an enemy of the Russian state, and this verdict was delivered by a man who at that very moment was complaining that his own trial had been farcical.

The Minneapolis paper calls this discussion the act of an agent provacateur. But Mooney needs no provocation to discreditable words. His words discredited him in advance of that writing with believers in the present system, for he has made no secret of his belief that the American form of society and government are outmoded or of his intention to work for a new and, as he believes, better one.

A similar declaration against the existing system in Russia would be punished in the manner which Mooney justified as to the Moscow executions. So it is obvious that if the Communists had anything at all to do with Mooney's liberation and the belated vindication of the American system they betrayed their own principles.

The Minneapolis paper ignores completely the question of Communist support of Mooney and fails to mention his attitude on the Russian way with dissenters. It does not go into the fact that only recently in Russia men have been executed for framing innocent Russians, who, unlike Mooney, were quickly and permanently effaced on framed evidence. So they have their Sacco-Vanzetti and Mooney mishaps in the promised land and many Mooneys in their prisons for refusing to surrender the produce of their farms, many Mooneys in prison charged with inefficiency or laziness on their jobs.

The Communists who were so indignant about Mooney's case in this country have said nothing about these small irregularities in Russia and on the question of perjured testimony in Mooney's trial it is fair to ask when any Communist became so sensitive about a small matter of perjury, if perjury would serve the party line. Indeed, any Communists who faltered at a little job of perjury on a party job would be severely disciplined.

Although there is a Communist party in this free country (and who can imagine an anti-Communist party in Russia?), it is a question whether it is permissible to call a man Communist who refuses to admit that he is one. It is safe and legal to call a man even a Communist, a New Dealer, and many Communists call themselves New Dealers. It is even permissible to call a man a Republican, although a Communist might sue for vindication and ask damages on the ground that on some trip to Russia he might be placed in peril of death by the accusation.

The Labor Review in this case seems to have been guilty of careless reading or of confusing labor in this country with Communism. They are not synonymous, and the discussion which it regards as an attempt at provocation to some unnamed excess only insisted that if Mooney had been dealt with by this country as a man in corresponding circumstances would have been treated in Communist Russia there would have been no big parade for Tom Mooney in San Francisco.

of Vendrell, road fork on the south coast, was conceded by the government. But so far there is no government confirmation that Igualada has fallen, as asserted by Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

Five insurgent armies, strongly filled out with Italians, according to the government, are moving eastward and southward, and seem to be making rapid progress, principally due to the overwhelming superiority of their mechanical equipment.

Four full divisions of Italians, government quarters said, are battling in the Igualada sector. They are aided by a division of Spanish Navarrese, the finest mountain-terrain fighters in Franco's hosts.

Meanwhile dispatches from Nationalist Spain said today that the next seven days might prove decisive in the insurgent drive on Barcelona. Dispatches which passed through the hands of Loyalist censors, admitted grave losses to government troops and intimated pointedly that preparations were being made to evacuate Barcelona.

Gen. Francisco Franco, the insurgent chieftain, in a report sent from his advanced headquarters, said that the campaign was approaching its climax.

Nationalist authorities announced that the Count of Montseny had been named president of the Barcelona provincial council and that a town council for Barcelona would be announced today.

(The Nationalists made similar appointments for the government of Madrid early in November, 1936, when it appeared, prematurely, that the capital was doomed.—Ed.)

Cardinal, Klan Chief Meet at Dedication

Roman Catholics of Atlanta, Ga., dedicate an imposing new structure, the Co-Cathedral of Christ the King, at Atlanta before several well-known guests, including Dr. Hiram Wesley Evans, imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, an organization once known as the bitterest opponent of the Roman Catholic church in America. Dr. Evans was invited to the ceremony by the Rt. Rev. Gerald P. O'Hara, bishop of the Savannah-Atlanta diocese. While the bishop made no reference to the fact in his announcement, the new Co-Cathedral was erected on the site of the former headquarters of the Klan. The parish house once was the "palace" of W. J. Simmons, founder of the Klan. In the photo, Dennis Cardinal Dougherty of Philadelphia, who conducted the ceremonies, greets Dr. Evans.

DOCTOR DIES IN AUTO

GALLIPOLIS—(AP)—Dr. William E. Howell, 68, prominent physician, was found dead in his automobile here today. A heart ailment was believed to have caused death.

HITLER'S PLAN SIGNALS DRIVE

Military Decrees Order All Able-Bodied to Organize In Preparedness Step.

the object of the decree is to ensure that all able-bodied men in the reich "shall preserve their spiritual and physical energies." All males over the age of 17 who are fit to serve in the army shall henceforth be "under moral obligation" to acquire the so-called "storm troopers sports badge."

To lend dignity to the decoration and encourage all young Germans to obtain it, the insignia was elevated to the level of a "defense badge."

The conditions necessary for obtaining it include proficiency in a number of athletic performances, some of them of a military character, such as throwing imitation hand grenades. All members of the army reserve including the "Landwehr," which consists of men beyond the regular age of military service, will be affected.

As Hitler thus consolidated his hold on the life of Germany, his government apparently ignored the suddenly disrupted conferences on the plight of German Jews. George Rublee, American director of the International Refugee committee, whose conversations with Schacht were peremptorily discontinued upon the latter's replacement as reichsbank chief by Economics Minister Walther Funk, prepared to leave for Paris with his aides tonight.

Rublee remained hopeful that some new avenue of approach on the Jewish problem may yet be found and will return to Germany at some future date if it transpires that the German government desires or is even willing to resume the negotiations.

The diplomatic drive to the east was resumed with a lengthy conversation between Czechoslovak Minister Frantisek Chvalkovsky and German Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop.

Stricken Friday

MRS. FILOMENA DALEY

MRS. DALEY, 75, TAKEN BY DEATH

Had Been Active In Italian Circles For Many Years; Funeral Tuesday.

Mrs. Filomena Cormina Daley, 75, wife of Peter Daley, and one of the best known figures in Italian circles in the city for many years, died at her home, 141 West Sixth street, Friday evening following an illness of four weeks.

To hundreds of Mansfielders she was known as "Mother Daley" because of her humanitarian work among her own people. For many years and so long as her health permitted she spent much of her time in homes where there was sickness and need of friendly aid, and was particularly interested in the arrival of babies in her own community, sometimes taking sole care of mothers and babies. She was an active member of St. Peter's Catholic church.

Mrs. Daley was born Dec. 9, 1863 at St. Pietro, Avellana, Italy, coming to Mansfield in 1899. She was married June 5, 1887. The Daleys celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary two years ago.

She is survived by her husband, four daughters, Mrs. Frank Augustine, Mrs. Natalie Chillemi, Mrs. Charles Triscari and Mrs. Jack Brugano; a son, Tony Daley; a sister Mrs. Dominic Disanze, all of this city; 29 grand children and four great grandchildren. A son, James Daley, died several weeks ago.

Solemn requiem high mass will be read at funeral services Tuesday at 9:30 a. m. at St. Peter's church. Msgr. R. C. Goebel will be the celebrant. Burial will be made in the Catholic cemetery. The body will remain at the late home.

FARMERS GET FIRST CHECKS IN SOILS PLANS

$11,600 Distributed In County For Reducing 1938 Crops; $65,000 More Due.

Richland county farmers today received $11,616 of the $76,652 they will get this year for reducing their 1938 wheat and corn acreage and improving the soil on their farms under the federal soils conservation program.

Approximately 185 checks, ranging from 90 cents to $269, were received this morning at the county agricultural conservation office and were distributed immediately to farmers. The allocation of funds was the first in the county for the 1938 program.

The county's allotment of federal funds for the year is $9,613 more than farmers received last year for complying with crop requirements, but it represents only one-third of the amount county farmers could have earned if all of them had participated in the program, G. L. Taylor, county conservation chairman, pointed out.

The amount set up for the county's 3,488 farms was $279,570, but only 1,312 farm operators complied with the federal crop program.

Payments, which will be made on last year's crops and farm practices, will be received at the county conservation office and distributed to the farmers. The first allotment of checks is due now, and others are expected at intervals throughout the year. Taylor said.

29,000 Acres of Corn.

The county's corn acreage allotment under the federal program last year was 29,314 acres, and if farmers had kept within that allotment they would have received $104,651 from corn alone," the chairman pointed out. The payment for corn in 1938 was 10 cents per bushel, while wheat producers who participated in the crop program received 12 cents per bushel on a normal yield.

Payments will be boosted under the 1939 program, with conservation and price adjustment compensation increased to 15 cents a bushel for corn and from 27 to 29 cents per bushel for wheat.

The increase is due to a new provision in the plan which gives the farmer an additional fee for keeping his crop production within a county average to help stabilize prices for grain.

County farmers cooperating in the program are eligible for federal loans on their corn and wheat crops in addition to their conservation payments. Loans of 57 cents per bushel are now available on corn. The wheat loan plan has not been placed in operation in the county.

Urges Schooling In Democracy.

D for more adequate and dependable education of nerican children in the principles of democracy is ized by J. W. Studebaker, United States commissioner cation. He says:

rge the members of school boards, school officials, and teachers of the United States to give immediate attention to the problem of adapting the school curriculums and schedules to assure an adequate and meaningful treatment of the ideas, aims and spirit of democracy. There is no greater issue today before American education or before the American people."

It may have been too long taken for granted that the "spirit of democracy" is inherited, rather than acquired through intelligent understanding.

In any event it appears that instruction along these lines has been too long neglected and that at least an occasional teacher is tolerated in publicly sustained schools and colleges who inclines favorably toward some alien ism and who colors his teaching accordingly.

Without inclination to hamper individualism or freedom of thought, it seems entirely reasonable to apply certain standards of education in Americanism, to which all persons desiring to be engaged in the teaching profession in this country can conscientiously conform.

Age Looking at Youth.

TURN again, if you will, to the first page of yesterday's News-Journal. Note particularly the strength of character evidenced in the features of the Richland county woman who has reached the great age of one hundred years.

Then notice the intentness with which she seems to be looking across the page to the pictured faces of those three young people who have been awarded scholastic honors in the January graduating class of Mansfield high school.

This centenarian has had an unusually long look at life. She has played a part in the wonderful drama of human existence while the United States was being hewn from a wilderness and made into a great nation. She has undergone the hardships that make the pleasures of life more enjoyable.

Hers has been the privilege of observing changing conditions from stage coach to aeroplane, from pony express to radio communication, from the first crude daguerreotype to the color motion picture—the most marvelous century-span in the world's history.

And so she looks across the printed page, through the eyes of age and varied experience, at pictures typifying youth of today—as they move toward accomplishment of even greater things than she has witnessed during her five score years of life.

Self-Perpetuating War.

ACCORDING to the League of Nations Armaments Yearbook the civilized world last year spent $16,000,000,000 on its armies, navies, war planes and other military expenditures. Seven powers—the United States, Great Britain, Germany, France, Italy, Japan and the Soviet Union—accounted for more than three-fourths of the total. It will be more this year.

Defense against aggressively-inclined governments is recognized as necessary, but no government admits to such an attitude. All profess earnestly to want peace and to be promoting it steadfastly. None of them, apparently, believe the others. Some of them, at the present time, belie their words with aggressive acts even while they boast of their peaceful purposes.

It is distressing to think what might be done with $16,000,000,000 for health, education, social welfare, mutually beneficial trade, recreation, research, science and the arts. Such resources would be so used by a civilization that knew how to break the vicious circle of wars and depressions created by past wars and depressions and laying the foundation for future wars and depressions.

More Money for Railroads.

THE most important business problem in America, says a prominent economist, is the railroad situation. The railroads represent one-fifth of all our investment and normally use one-fifth of our coal, steel, fuel oil and lumber. When they are good customers, we all prosper; when they are poor customers, we all slump.

The economist goes ahead with the statement: "A large part of our railroad system is insolvent, and most of the rest is threatened with insolvency. The cause is simple. It is that there is no longer a wide enough margin between the expenses of the roads and their revenues."

Plain English, the prosperity of all of us is threatened because the railroads are not making enough money. How is the problem to be solved? Not by loans, says this expert. Not by mergers, and not by cancelling indebtedness of the roads. Solution depends, he says, simply on the railroads making more money. It is the same answer that we get to nearly all our problems. And it doesn't seem to clear things up at all.

The question is, how are the railroads going to make more money? They usually try raising their rates, but that has failed lately. Now many of them are trying the opposite procedure, lowering their rates for passengers to win back patronage. What if they should lower freight rates, too?

Still the Best Seller.

ONCE more a literary survey shows that, as judged by current sales, the most popular book in America is the Bible. It runs ahead of "Gone With the Wind," "Anthony Adverse," "The Rains Came," "Good Earth," Dale Carnegie's success books and all the others.

This, be it observed, in spite of a prevalent impression that "nobody reads the Bible any more."

Some psychologists are contending that sleep is unnecessary—but are not suggesting any substitute.

Watching Trends

—By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON—Evidently Europe never will understand us Americans.

The other day Ambassadors Kennedy and Bullitt told a congressional committee of the terrible prospect of war in Europe. (It was told in secret session, but enough leaked out so everybody knew something of what they had said.)

And what happened? The European stock market sagged in alarm. European speculators evidently thought Kennedy and Bullitt knew more of what was going on in Europe than Europe did. Maybe so.

But the New York stock market, hearing the same reports, bubbled right along, undisturbed by wars or rumors of wars. Wall Street attributed the Bullitt-Kennedy show to "politics."

Easy to Be Well Read If—

ONE of the privileges enjoyed most by wives of members of congress is their priority access to new books in the Congressional library. Before the new members had been sworn in several wives were at the library desk explaining who they were and insisting on taking out some of the newest and latest without so much as a day's delay for identification.

A half dozen or more copies of every book copyright for sale in the United States must be sent to the Congressional library where copyrights are recorded. In addition the library buys extra copies of books likely to have special demand.

Requests by members of congress, either for themselves or for their wives, take priority over all other requests. If lay readers with library privileges happen to be reading the book, they can be told to bring it back on 24 hours notice. A messenger may be sent for it if the congressional lady is impatient.

Break for Music Lovers.

TUCKED away in one corner of the big library building is a concert hall seating perhaps 1,000 where knowing ones enjoy some of the choicest musical treats available in the country. These are concerts financed by foundations, one established by Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge (not of the President Coolidges) and Mrs. Gertrude Clark Whittall.

Whittall concerts are played on Stradivarius instruments Mrs. Whittall donated to the library for their historical and educational value. Stradivarius instruments, nearing 200 years old, are the choicest in existence and the group of five donated by Mrs. Whittall are worth many times their weight in gold. Some Stradivarius violins cost up to $50,000 at present and the price climbs steadily as they disappear into private collections.

The Whittall group includes three violins, a viola and a cello. They are kept in an air-conditioned chamber when not in use at concerts or rehearsals.

Since violins lose their tone if not used regularly, the foundation requires that concerts be given frequently at which all the instruments are used. The curator of the instruments sits at the elbow of the musicians during rehearsals and performances.

Tickets, priced reasonably, are sold out months in advance for each concert. The musical menu is completely classical, and congressional wives don't pack THAT assembly. Much of the audience is made up of music teachers of modest fortune glad of an afternoon or evening with the masters while they escape the screechy sawings of their pupils.

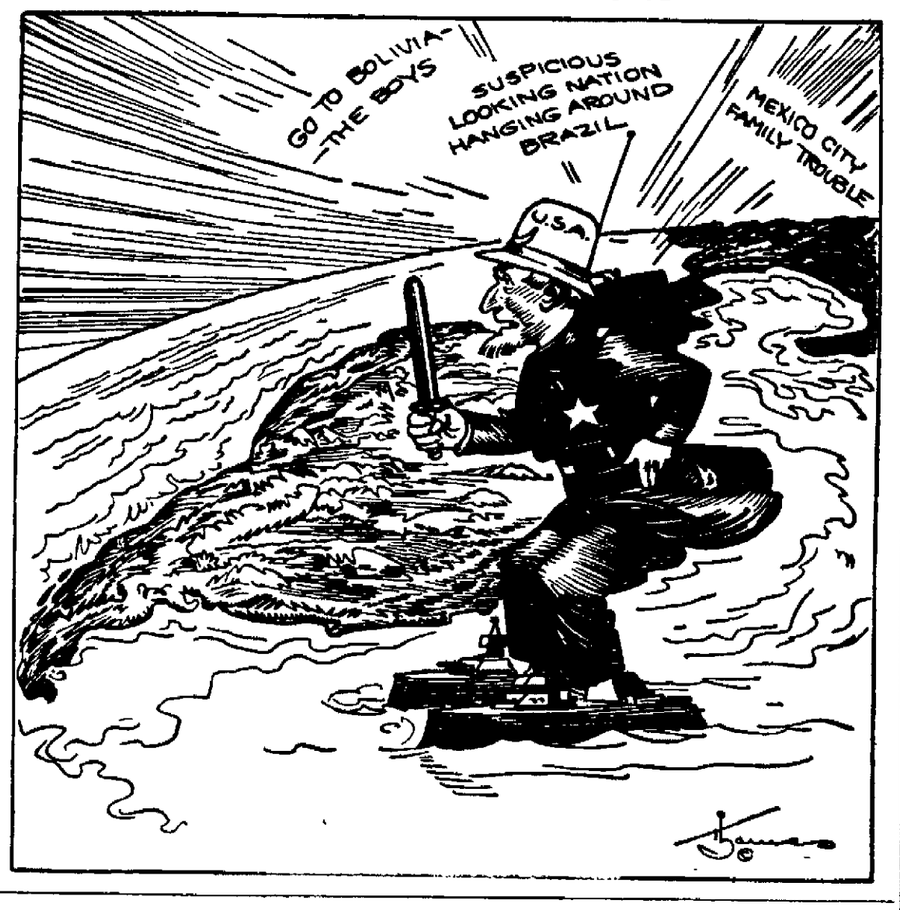
BIG JOB FOR UNCLE SAM



Greater Preparedness Essential

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—In demanding more appropriations for preparedness, both army and navy officers are merely voicing publicly what they have known and been saying privately for six years.

Starvation of the army and navy, so far as new material is concerned, began in the Hoover administration, when poor business cut tax returns and pinched the federal exchequer. This has gone on until, with little or no purchasing of new arms, new guns, new ammunition, and even new explosives, there developed a situation which high officials admit might easily have been tragic had some emergency arisen under which the army and navy would have had to fight.

The simplest illustration is that explosives deteriorate. This is true despite the occasional tragic accident when some old shell explodes, as when it is plowed into on a battlefield. But long range firing by big guns is a matter of infinite calculation. When naval or coast defense gunners are trying to hit a hostile ship ten or more miles away, the quality of the explosive that propels the shell they fire is of tremendous importance.

Incidentally it is usually the explosive in a "dud" shell that hurts some one in an accident. This is NOT the explosive that propelled that shell. It is the charge that should have detonated when the shell hit its mark. This is also an important charge, of course, but when it comes to hitting the enemy in battle it is the propelling charge that is vital. A slight deterioration could make a difference of a half a mile, more or less, in where the shell landed.

It would easily make the difference between winning or losing an important naval battle. Present-day naval strategy gives the victory to the first fleet to land a salvo on the target. That is the reason the superior optical instruments of the Germans in the World war made their otherwise inferior fleet such a menace—which made the losses of the British so heavy at Jutland.

NOT only has the explosives supply of the United States army and navy been allowed to grow stale and risk its being incalculable for accurate firing in battle, but actually to this day there is not an adequate factory source for its supply.

Machinery is now in preparation for such a supply, and the fact that it is makes an extraordinary revelation of the desperate nature of the picture. About a year ago this machinery was ordered without the sanction of congress and without publicity, at a cost of $3,300,000. The orders were made possible by a private individual, who guaranteed the orders. In short, he would have been obliged either to take over the machinery himself or to lose his money, if congress should not later legalize the operation.

BUT the amazing part of the whole story is that these needs were realized in 1933, and that certain army officers obtained enactment by congress, in the first four billion four hundred million dollar relief bill (which included N. R. A.) for the mechanization and motorization of the army. But this effort was wasted. Not a cent of the huge relief fund was so spent.

There are those who think there would have been no Munich if it had been.

Listen, World!

Have Persons on Relief the Right to Marry?

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

THIS time . . . surprise, surprise!—a gentleman with a Wall Street rating which consumes half the page rises to protest. Cause? A judge recently refused to marry a young couple who were upon relief. Whereupon our esteemed correspondent thunders—

"BY WHAT AUTHORITY, HUMAN OR DIVINE, DOES ANY JUDGE REFUSE THE SACRED SACRAMENT OF MARRIAGE?"

"It's easy, I know, to sit in black robes and smugly tell young people, whose only crime is their poverty, that they may not wed. But are not most of us descended from paupers . . . poor people who landed on these shores with nothing but hope? So why should any man—be he judge or king—destroy the dreams of two young hearts?"

B. M. W.—2205 Davidson Ave.
New York City.

Which query should jar the most placid family loose from its contented cud. All questions have two sides . . . but this one has at least eight or nine or maybe eleven. All loaded with dynamite and dum-dum bullets.

"By what power, should anyone challenge a penniless couple's right to wed?"

We admit that's a mouthful... and hastily confess that we're no authority on law—either human or divine. Yet—even to our limited comprehension—this certainly seems more than a matter of mere wedlock.

Marriage is, assuredly, a sacred covenant — the most sacred our stupid human spirits may contract. But it is also a serious human obligation, as you'll know darned soon if you have to face a peevish landlady. God, undoubtedly, will bless a loving union. But there isn't one teeny-weeny-bittsy-hint that he'll pay the butcher or gas bill . . . So what?

Are we to place marriage on the luxury list, as our fathers did . . . and enter it only when and if we have some hope, however slight, of paying for the privilege ourselves?

OR ARE WE TO CAST OBLIGATIONS TO THE WIND AND LET THE TAXPAYERS DO THE SWEATING?

Far be it from me to scorn the plight of the penniless—I lived too long in those ranks myself. But I cannot believe that we are doing anyone a lasting favor . . . least of all those on relief . . . by lifting all responsibility from their shoulders and placing them in the catagory of imbeciles and infants.

Marriage has been called "a glorious estate." But is it glorious if a man and woman pay for it with their self-respect . . . or their decent regard for human rights?

AND ARE ANY COUPLE FIT FOR MARRIAGE UNLESS THEY HAVE FIRST PROVEN THEIR ABILITY TO SUPPORT A HOME?

I DOUBT IT!

"Would you," asks friend B. M. W.—, "destroy the hope that beats in the hearts of two lovers who come to be joined in wedlock and leave them shackled with bands of steel?"

You can bet your sweet life I would, partner! "Destroying hopes" that have to be supported by somebody else's pocketbook is one of the things I would like to do first and most. I'm 100% for any really necessary relief for the sick, the helpless and the aged. But I'm Plain Poison on this idea of playing Santa Claus to every lazy grafter who wants all the pleasures and privileges of first-class American life, without sweating for them.

So bring on your brickbats—I can take 'em!

Timely Editorial

Co-operation Succeeded.

One of the important factors in fighting the dreaded disease, tuberculosis, is improvement in the supply of good milk. The drastic campaign to eradicate from the dairy herds of the United States all animals suffering from tuberculosis is showing remarkable results.

A recent report of the federal bureau of animal industry, reviewing the year's work, says that 47 states now are in the so-called modified accredited area, which means that tests of all the cattle reveal not more than one-half of one per cent reacting. This is practical eradication, since the small percentage reacting are those contracting the disease later than a previous test, an unavoidable mischance.

Effectiveness of state and federal agencies and excellent co-operation of farmers and dairymen have brought about this splendid achievement.—Detroit News.

What's Happened?

Week-End Summary of Current Events.

SOME 10,000,000 Americans are unemployed—able to work but unable to find jobs. About half, presumably, are living on their savings or their relatives. The others?

The federal government is borrowing $2,000,000,000 a year to make work for 3,000,000 of them. States, counties and cities are spending $500,000,000 yearly—much of it borrowed money—to give 2,000,000 more a dole.

That, in round numbers, is "the relief problem"—Problem No. 1 before the three-week-old 76th congress.

Jobs and Dollars.

A revised approach to the whole problem was suggested last week-end by the senate unemployment committee:

1. Expansion of the unemployment compensation system to take care of the jobless for a few weeks after they are thrown out of work;

2. Creation of a Department of Public Works (combining WPA, PWA, CCC and NYA) to direct work relief for those not soon reabsorbed by private industry;

3. Establishment of minimum federal assistance for the aged, the blind and dependent children.

That program, with the states sharing more of the cost than now, was urged for next year. The immediate congressional relief work was to provide money to keep WPA going until the new fiscal year begins July 1. For that, the President asked $875,000,000. The house, last week, whittled his figure down to $725,000,000 and appended a ban on political activity by relief administrators. And many senators, it appeared, were in no mood to be more liberal.

Meanwhile, Mr. Roosevelt tossed congress a related problem—social security. Submitting a report by the Social Security board, he urged bigger payments sooner to more people and warned against "turning to untried and demonstrably unsound panaceas."

Arms and Men.

In other communications this week, the President asked congress to: (1) Revive work on the Florida ship canal and the Passamaquoddy, Me., tide-harnessing project; (2) give careful thought to a program of federal medical aid for the needy; (3) pass a law permitting the federal government to tax state salaries and the income from future state bond issues, and vice versa.

Congressmen seemed more interested, however, in a communication FDR sent them last week—his request for a $522,000,000 defense program on top of the regular army and navy appropriations. Committees studied bills to authorize doubling the army's air fleet to 6,000 planes.

State Suggestions.

Thirty-three state legislatures also are meeting this month. Proposals they pondered this week included: (1) An Arizona woman's suggestion that the way to get out the vote would be to lay a $25 fine on every member of the electorate who failed to show up at the polls; (2) a New Yorker's bill to require that voting machine knobs be painted red, white and blue.

New Idol No. 1.

No longer do the cop and the cowboy lead as idols of American boys. The aviator is tops now, according to a Northwestern university survey reported to the National Aeronautics association in St. Louis this week.

The conference buzzed with talk of President's Roosevelt's plan to help 20,000 a year of those boys become aviators. Consensus was that U. S. aviation facilities would have to be vastly expanded for such a program. And, said one manufacturer: "Greater production . . . certainly is going to lead to less cost."

Uncle Sam, Landowner.

States can't tax federal property. Local revenues sometimes suffer, therefore, when the government buys up land for forest reserves, flood-control reservoirs, etc. President Roosevelt created a Federal Real Estate board, this week, to study that and other problems connected with federal acquisition, ownership and disposition of land. The federal government, he disclosed, owns about 20 per cent of all U. S. land—ranging from .1 per cent in Iowa to 82 per cent in Nevada.

Prohibition Prediction.

Sen. Morris Sheppard, a Texas teetotaller, is known as the "father of the 18th amendment." Each year, on prohibition's anniversary, he makes a speech in the senate about the evils of drink. This week, on its 19th anniversary, he predicted prohibition's return. "Three times as many women and girls are working in liquor-selling places," he added, "as there are women students in the public universities, colleges and teacher normals of the country."

Brow Situation.

To be somebody around Washington these days, two Capitol Hill barbers contended this week, you need a set of beetle-brows. They cited Vice President Garner (whose thick brows curl up at the ends), Sen. Norris (with the wiry, unruly type) and Speaker Bankhead (black, shaggy variety). John L. Lewis, observers agree, has probably the bushiest set of brows in public life. Secretary Hull's grey ones are thicker than some moustaches.

At Home

Economy Efforts.

Ohio's new Republican Gov. John W. Bricker, in a war on "needless waste of public funds," fired 1,047 state employes in five days last week. Oklahoma's law makers pondering a $26,000,000 deficit, have been asked by new Democratic Gov. Leon C. Phillips to abolish 11 state bureaus. Nebraska's one-house legislature is considering a 25 per cent salary cut for several appointive state officers. And similar economy campaigns, a survey showed this week, are afoot in several other states.

Wage Rulings.

1. Telegraph messenger boys must be paid at least 25 cents an hour. Wage-Hour Administrator Andrews ruled thus this week after Western Union and Postal Telegraph complained they would have to drop 5,000 boys if they complied with Uncle Sam's new standards.

2. Steel workers in plants selling material to the government must be paid at least 45 to 62½ cents an hour, depending on what section of the country they work in. That ruling resulted from a five-month study by the labor department, begun after congress passed a law requiring government contractors to pay their employes at "prevailing rates."

Patents and Monopoly.

Present U. S. law grants patentholders a 17-year monopoly on their inventions. To investigate charges that patent laws encourage industrial monopoly, the temporary national economic committee resumed its hearings in Washington this week.

An engineer produced a tiny thermostat which cost $10,000 to develop. Without patent laws to ensure his company a profit, he said, the gadget would never have been developed.

Practical Psychology.

For 13 months Buffalo, N. Y., policemen have been making war on horse-race betting establishments. But buzzer warning systems often thwarted their efforts to get evidence of gambling. So the cops turned to "picketing." Uniformed patrolmen are stationed in front of suspected bookmaking joints, and police say the "psychological effect" is ruining the bookies' business.

Big Haul.

Twenty-six million nickels—$1,300,000 worth—weigh 144 tons. To steal that many in five years, thieves would have to cart away more than 158 pounds a day. That, New York's District Attorney Dewey charged this week, is just what some employes of the city subway did.

Abroad

Political Explosions.

Frightened residents of English and Northern Irish cities jerked on gas masks last Monday, tumbled from their homes and scanned the skies. Hearing a series of terrific blasts, they thought war had come. Scotland Yard, however, blamed the illegal Irish Republican army, which advocates a united Ireland free of Britain. Eleven widely scattered bomb explosions did little damage but led to the posting of guards around dockyards, power plants and No. 10 Downing street, where Prime Minister Chamberlain lives.

Wandering Jews.

Five hundred Jews who managed to get out of Germany and Italy rejoiced last week because they were almost in sight of their "new home-land' in Paraguay, South America. Then Paraguay suddenly cancelled all immigration permits issued since November. Stranded this week at Montevideo, Uruguay, the hapless Jews got permission to stay 60 days. After that . . .?

Foreign Footnotes.

Russian officials pressed an efficiency campaign by ordering criminal trials for 14 factory managers accused of being lax with loafers. . . . Germany, in an effort to meet an acute shortage of doctors resulting from the Nazi ban on Jewish physicians, will lop two years off the time required for a medical education.
